BANNER SESSION

For the Uplift of the Colored Race.

MONEY SUBSCRIBED TO CARRY ON Y. M. C. A. WORK.

W. J. TRENT SPEAKS ON "SELF RELIANCE."

STACY ON ORGANIZATION.

"Never before in the history of the colored department of the Young Men's Christian Association's annual conferences have we had such a large attendance, such enthusiasm manifested and such an amount of money subscribed to carry on the work as the sessions in this city," declared Dr. J. E. Mooreland, of Washington, who presided yesterday at the second day's meeting of the nineteenth annual conference, which is being held at the branch library, Tenth and Chestnut streets.

Continuing, he said: "For nineteen years we have been training and inspiring young men to attack the problem of lifting the colored young men up to the standard of Christian men and efficient citizens. The growth and progress of the association has been marvelous. Its influence broad and work far-reaching."

At this point W. J. Trent, of Asheville, N. C., led in singing and the whole association joined in what proved to be one of the happiest moments of the two days' session. He then began an enthusiastic address on the subject of "Self-Reliance." He said that it was now time for the colored men to help raise money for the support of their international secretaries. The speaker told how the race must depend upon itself for many things, and started a subscription for Y. M. C. A. work. Others followed and over $400 was raised, the largest amount ever raised at a colored conference for a similar cause. Bishop George W. Clinton spoke in the interest of raising money.

A great deal of enthusiasm was added by the presence of P. C. Dix, State secretary of Kentucky. He spoke on "Leadership and Efficiency." He said that efficient leaders were

WAGON AND TEAM CRASHES THROUGH SCALES.
A wagon loaded with crushed feed, belonging to the Louisville Cereal Mill Company, crashed through a scale platform at 500 East Main street at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The wagon was demolished and the feed scattered, and one of the mules probably rendered valueless. The driver, Ed White, colored, escaped with slight bruises. The scales are owned by Frank Birchler. The platform gave way after the wagon was stopped on the scales. The wagon and team fell a distance of twelve feet and the mules had to be hoisted out of the pit with a derrick.

UNDERHILL SCHOOL CONTRACT STATUS
LEGAL QUESTION WILL BE DECIDED AT THE MEETING OF BOARD TO-MORROW NIGHT.

The legality of the letting of contracts for the erection of a new school on Broadway, near Barret avenue, to take the place of the Underhill-street school, probably will be decided at the regular meeting of the School Board to-morrow night. Some of the members of the board held that the transaction was illegal, while Joseph Piazza, chairman of the building committee, and others say they see no reason why Rummel Bros. should not go on with the contract which was awarded them at the last meeting of the board for excavation and basement and structural ironwork as this firm, according to Mr. Piazza, was the lowest bidder. Mr. Piazza stated last night it was decided that the letting of the contract was illegal the action of the board would be to rescind the bid for bids, both ways, in lump and in detail, on the structure, and let the contract be awarded to the lowest bidder. Other business to come before the board will be of a routine nature.

HABEAS CORPUS
Proceedings Result In Release of W. T. Kammerer.

AS BEING HELD IN ARMORY AS MILITARY PRISONER.

ATTORNEYS ATTACH MUCH IMPORTANCE TO CASE.

MAY ESTABLISH PRECEDENT.

William T. Kammerer, who was arrested on a military charge of insubordination by a detail of soldiers under Capt. H. I. Fox Friday night at Twenty-fourth and Walnut streets, was released under bond of $200 by order of Judge Samuel Kirby in the Circuit Court at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Kammerer was confined in the guardhouse at the armory all night, and yesterday afternoon through his attorney, Joseph M. Lee, instituted habeas corpus proceedings.

While the court heard but part of the argument yesterday, it decided that until such time as the court makes a decision, Kammerer is entitled to his liberty. The case will be resumed in Judge Kirby's court at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. Attorneys for both sides declare that this is a great test case and is of such moment that it possibly will be carried to the United States Supreme Court, and may establish a precedent.

In his petition Kammerer named Col. Harry Grinstead, Capt. J. Reginald Clements, Capt. H. I. Fox and Sergt. Walter Bailey as defendants. The petition states that he was arrested December 3; that he was wrongfully and without due process of law being detained by force in the armory.

Judge Kirby sits in case. It was thought by many that Judge Kirby would decline to try the case on the ground that, being a military case, it was out of his jurisdiction. When the case came up for a hearing at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Judge Kirby decided that this is a great test case and is of such moment that it possibly will be carried to the United States Supreme Court, and may establish a precedent.

In his petition Kammerer named Col. Harry Grinstead, Capt. J. Reginald Clements, Capt. H. I. Fox and Sergt. Walter Bailey as defendants. The petition states that he was arrested December 3; that he was wrongfully and without due process of law being detained by force in the armory.

Judge Kirby heard a portion of Mr. Carroll's argument and then adjourned the case until to-morrow morning. He said, however, that he would reserve his decision until he had heard all of the arguments. Dr. Ellis Duncan and William A. Colston went Kammerer's case to-morrow.

In his argument Mr. Carroll declared that that part of the Kentucky Statutes which supposedly governs the State militia is unconstitutional. The attorney went on to say that the provision in Section 2707 of the Kentucky Statutes providing that the act of Congress for the government of the militia of the United States and that the Articles of War shall be in force in Kentucky is void, because those laws are not set out fully in the Kentucky Statutes, as required by the constitution.

Maj. Mechling's Contention. Presenting his side of the case further.

Quotes From Section 16.

"All prisoners shall be bailable by sufficient securities unless for capital offenses, when the proof is evident or the presumption great."

McCarroll showed that this included all prisoners, and did not specify that the term "prisoners" did not include those under military arrest. He denied the right of the authorities to throw into confinement a member of the militia without giving him bail or an immediate hearing.

In speaking unofficially of the case last night Maj. H. E. Mechling, of the First Battalion, which includes C Company, of which Kammerer is a member, said that the officers of the militia are going to fight the case through the highest courts of the country, and that they intend to establish for all time whether the civil courts have precedence over the military courts or vice versa. The officer said that Attorney General Breathitt would take part in the case to-morrow.

He said that if the Supreme Court decides that the military court has no jurisdiction, then the right of the militia authority, including the Governor of the State, to call out the militia in cases of riot or trouble or in aid of the civil courts, would be null and void.

At a hearing conducted by the commission it was testified that the earnings of the company in this State last year were $250,494 and the profits 37½ per cent.

CHANCE

For All To Discuss New Albany Appointments.

MAYOR-ELECT GREENE NOT IN A HURRY.

MOVE TO INCREASE SALARY OF EXECUTIVE.

HAS MANY RESPONSIBILITIES.

Mayor-elect, Newton A. Greene, of New Albany, who will become chief executive of that city on January 3, said last evening that he would consult with his friends and the members of the Common Council before making his announcements of appointments under the new administration, and that he did not think he would give out the list for publication until a few days before he assumed his official duties. The Mayor-elect says he will defer largely to the wishes of the Councilmen as to most of the appointments, as he appreciates the fact that they should have voice in the selection as well as the Mayor, as both were elected by the people.

Question of Salary.

Mr. Greene would like to give his whole time to the Mayor's office if he could afford to do so, but as the salary fixed under the act of 1909 is only $1,200 per annum, if the minimum and not the maximum is allowed by the Council, he cannot afford to give up his business for such a meager salary. Several of the Councilmen want to fix the salary at $2,000 a year, and argue that this is a large salary for a Mayor in a city with a population of 25,000, if the Mayor gives his whole time to the duties.

As the office of City Judge, Controller and Board of Works are to be abolished after January 1, resulting in a saving of about $5,000 a year, the Councilmen favoring the maximum urge that the Mayor will have more responsibilities and that he should have at least as large a salary as his predecessor. Among other things the incoming Mayor will have the duties of Police Judge to attend to, which is now costing the city $1,500 a year.

Police Commissioners.

There is still considerable speculation as to who the Mayor will appoint or suggest for Police Commissioners. Frank Green, the outgoing City and County Treasurer, is supposed to be in connection with the presidency of the police board. He can have the position if he desires it, as he is close to the Mayor, and would naturally be in securing his nomination and election. Mr. Green retires from the office of Treasurer, where he made an exceptionally fine record. His last report made to the County Auditor shows that the tax collections have been better than ever before in the history of the city and county, and that there are fewer delinquents this year than ever before. As the majority of the Council favor Capt. Thomas Cannon for Chief of Police the Mayor and his board will most likely defer to their wishes.

The Mayor has tendered the office of City Attorney to Charles W. Schneider, and he assured the Mayor he would accept, but not if it would embarrass him.

Asked to Retain Bluecoats.

The Mayor has been importuned to retain a large number of the present police and firemen, among them Capt. William Adams, present Police Chief; Capt. Joe Featheringill, Fire Chief; Sergeant Wesley McCulloch, and other Republicans, but as the Mayor says, he will defer to the wishes of the Councilmen about this. A resolution was introduced in the Floyd County Democratic Club Thursday night, which turned out to be a joke, asking the Mayor to retain Capt. Featheringill as Chief, and it provoked a storm, which only subsided when the mover of the resolution disclosed that it was a joke, and that Capt. Featheringill only desired to be retained in the department, but not as Chief. Chief of Police Adams wants to hold the place now held by Capt. Cannon, and the Mayor has been advised that it would be good policy as well as good politics to retain such experienced men.

The Mayor-elect says he can not give those related to him places, and as there are so many places to be filled, he will be compelled to displace some, but he will endeavor to appoint men who will be satisfactory to the majority of the people.

Scheme Was Long Contemplated.

One of the directors of the Second National Bank said yesterday that the plan to merge the Merchants' National Bank with the Second National, which is to be carried into effect on December 20, had been in contemplation long before the tragedy in which J. H. Fawcett lost his life at the hands of Thomas J. Hoal, and the way was made for the merger.

Merger Plan Explained.

A circular letter sent to the stockholders of the Second National Bank yesterday explains the merger plan and also the proposed purchase of the stock in the New Albany Trust Company on January 1. In order that this may be accomplished each shareholder of the consolidated bank is to pay $20 on each share of stock owned. The agreement provides that the stock of the trust company is to be held by three trustees for the benefit of the shareholders of the bank, which is to do a savings bank business and other things allowed by its charter, but the bank and trust company will be operated separately. The committee from the two banks, of which Earl S. Gwin, president of the Second National Bank, is chairman, is now determining the book values of each bank stock and the new stock is to be exchanged for share in the new company. The values are determined and a report made on December 20.

Mr. Fawcett's Scheme.

Had J. H. Fawcett lived it was his intention to establish a trust company in St. Paul or some other city in the Northwest, after the merger had been completed. One of the attorneys settling up Mr. Fawcett's estate yesterday said that the value of it would be about $1,000, and of this the widow would receive one-half and the surviving son of Mr. Fawcett, by a former marriage, would receive the other half. The estate is now being settled in the Floyd Circuit Court.

Good Roads Movement.

The merchants of New Albany and the farmers of Floyd county are taking steps to secure better roads in which particular Floyd county is far behind other counties in the State. The only well roads in the State now remaining

Pimpily People Bothered With Boils

Should Use Stuart's Calcium Wafer to Rid Themselves of These Annoyances.

A Trial Package Free. Your blood is badly out of order, otherwise you would not have those unsightly pimples, painful boils, beauty destroying eruptions, pustules and eruptions that are constant source of annoyance and mortification to you. They vex and give you pain and no one but yourself knows what a source of unhappiness they are. So far as you are able you have concealed your trouble with powder and wash, but these were no good; your trouble was there all the same and only a little more aggravated by what you had attempted to do. There is no use in the world doing this sort of thing. The truth is it is a serious matter and requires serious action. Not palliative, but radical. You must go right to the very source of the trouble and then something tangible and satisfactory can be done, and some good results realized.

The blood must be seen to. Wherever that goes, it distributes to the different parts of the body whatever it carries. In other words, it peddles whatever is in it. If it contains good wastes all well and good; if it holds pernicious wastes, then all is in vain. It is a constant distributor of health or disease, and it stands to reason that it must be seen to that its work is made up of the proper stuff. In your case there is poison in the pack as evidenced by your skin trouble, the pimples on your face and the boils on your body.

To counteract this bad condition of the blood, we need what STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS supply—and when they make their internal work, they clean the surface of the body will resist the presence of these unnatural and foreign poisons, and will rid itself promptly and completely of them. The work will be a thorough one and no pretending or veneering. The Calcium Wafers regenerate the blood; make a vigorous and successful attack on the cause of the trouble; turn the fort, as it were, and in a hundred thousand battles for physical health they have come off victorious and with colors flying.

We offer a test of these wafers in our free trial package not a cure, under which we do not claim for them such potency that a trial package can effect a cure. If you are not cured, you will not be asked to pay for them. If you are cured, you will not be asked to pay for them. This offer of ours amounts to almost a guarantee of their efficacy. You can get a good supply or a box at a time; they are not like a liquid which may lose its strength with long standing or the bottle carelessly left uncorked. The wafers will keep in a box.

There is only a reasonable charge made for them and is the same as for good, common, sound sense and need no "booth" of high-sounding names to make them meretricious, or conceal what they lack. For the trial package address P. A. Stuart, Dr. 15 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

are in Floyd county, all of the others being free. There was a movement some time ago to have the county take over the Pack and Cordon turnpikes and make them free, but as there is a prospect of the pikes being sold to traction companies for the building of electric lines between New Albany and French Lick and between New Albany and Corydon, thence to Evansville and towns on the way, the scheme to take over the turnpikes has been abandoned temporarily.

It has come to light that some of the farmers in Floyd and other counties are depending upon a proposed act of Congress to secure good roads, and as this is a visionary scheme with no prospect whatever of being carried into effect, farmers are urged the County Commissioners to pay more attention to road building and repairs. There will be an election for road supervisors in New Albany and other counties in Floyd county and in the Third district on December 18, and it is suggested that men who are capable of doing the work are elected to the office. Their positions so that the good road movement will receive an impetus which will help in the future when the commissioners order roads to be built. Their positions are so that the good road movement will receive an impetus which will help in the future when the commissioners order roads to be built.

City Loses a Point.

Judge A. B. Anderson, of the Federal Court, has overruled a demurrer filed by the city of New Albany in response to the complaint of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, which filed a motion to mandate the city to enforce the collection of $4,000, a balance due on the judgment obtained some time ago for $65,000 for the improvement of Main street with asphalt. City Attorney Weather contended that the city had paid all that was coming to the Barber Company, and could not be compelled to pay the balance, as the corporation was already in debt exceeding its constitutional limit, and that the Barber Company had not fulfilled its contract to keep the street in repair. Judge Anderson overruled this demurrer, and set the case for hearing on December 18, when the suit will be decided upon its merits.

WAITS GOD'S COMMAND BEFORE HE WILL EAT.

Georgia Man Says Food Furnishes Fuel To Feed Disease—Fasted Twenty-eight Days.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 4.—A special to the Times from Rome, Ga., says: "Vowing that he will not allow food to pass his lips until Almighty God speaks to him and commands him to eat, William Tippen, a confectioner, and interested in industrial enterprises here, has fasted for twenty-eight days.

"He has suffered from tuberculosis for several years, but he believes that through faith and fasting he will be cured. His theory is that food simply furnishes fuel for the disease. Although his wife and friends beg him to eat, he declares he will not do so until the voice of God commands him. He says he is not hungry and has no desire for food, and will wait such time as God sees fit to restore his appetite.

"Tippen is very weak and unable to leave his bed, and his death is daily expected."

LINCOLN'S FIRST DOLLAR.

(Youth's Companion.) Lincoln was never ashamed of his obscure parentage and rude bringing up, as this story, found in a recent book by J. H. Ladd, of Louisville, fully proves.

"One morning in the Executive chamber, when the rights of labor had been under discussion, Lincoln's eyes suddenly began to twinkle.

"Seward," said he, "did you ever hear how I earned my first dollar?"

"Well, I was about 15 years old. I belonged, you know, to what they call down South, the trouble being that I do not own slaves are nobody there. But we had succeeded in raising, chiefly by my labor, sufficient product to enable me to justify me in taking it down the river to sell. I got mother's consent and conducted a little flatboat, which I thought I had raised down to New Orleans.

"A steamer was coming down the river. We have, you know, no wharves on the Western stream, and the custom was for passengers to go out in a boat to the steamer, which stopped for them to go on board.

"I was admiring my new flatboat, when two men came down to the ship in garriboes, with trunks, singled out my boat, and asked:

"Who owns this?"

"I do," I answered.

"Will you, said one of them, 'take us place on the steamer?'

"Certainly," said I, for I was very glad to have the chance of earning some money. I supposed that one of them would give me two or three bits.

"The trunks were full of flatboats, the passengers seated themselves on the trunks, and I sailed them out to the steamer. They lifted up their trunks and put them on deck. The steamer was about to put on steam again when I called out that they had forgotten to pay me. Each of them took out of his pocket silver half-dollar and threw on the floor of my boat.

"I could scarcely believe my eyes as I looked up at the money. Gentlemen, you may think it a very little thing, and in these days it seems to me a trifle, but it was the most important incident in my life.

"I could scarcely credit that I, a poor boy, had earned a dollar in less than a day—that by honest work I had earned a dollar. The world seemed wider and fairer before me. I was a more hopeful and confident being from that day.

It is easy to imagine the silence that must have fallen on that Cabinet as they heard this pathetic confession from their chief.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST JEFFERSONVILLE WATER COMPANY.

INSTITUTED IN CLARK CIRCUIT COURT YESTERDAY.

UNION SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY PLAINTIFF.

SEEKS SALE AT AUCTION.

The first steps toward winding up the affairs of the Jeffersonville Water Supply Company and, as it is understood, reorganizing it, were taken in the Clark Circuit Court at Jeffersonville yesterday afternoon when suit was filed to foreclose a mortgage on all of the holdings of the corporation and sell the plant at auction. Judgment was asked for $250,000. The company has been in bad lines for a long time, it is claimed, and it is said it has never been a paying investment.
The service has been unsatisfactory and for a long time the plaintiff refused to pay the water rent. At one period an agreement was made whereby the city was to pay $25,000, which was to be expended in improving the plant so pure water would be furnished the patrons. The amount was used as promised, but the improvement was not so far enough. There is a suit now pending to compel the company to live up to the contract. Recently it was taken to Floyd county on a change of venue.
The title of the action filed yesterday is the Union Safe Deposit and Trust Company, trustee for the holders of the refunding and improvement bonds of the Jeffersonville Water Supply Company, against the Jeffersonville Water Supply Company, Eliza A. Read, William T. Ingram and Anna H. Ingram. The suit was filed by George G. Howard, Jr., for Stannard & Howard, attorneys for the plaintiff. It is set forth that the plaintiff is a duly organized corporation under the laws of Maine and has headquarters in Portland, Cumberland county, Me.
The mortgage on all its property.

The complaint then sets forth that on December 1, 1909, the water company mortgaged to the plaintiff all of its property, both real and personal, to secure the payment of the principal and interest on an amount aggregating $225,000, which was represented by 100 bonds of the denomination of $2,250 each; 138 of the denomination of $1,000 each, all bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually and thirty-seven of the denomination of $1,000, on which the rate of interest is 3 per cent, all payable on August 1, 1909, and dating from August 1, 1909.
Continuing, the complaint recites that the time of the purchase of the land near Jeffersonville, Me., for herself, retained a life interest in the land, and half interest in the real estate conveyed and a like amount is due William T.
Ingram and Mrs. Anna Ingram, jointly, for balance of the purchase money.
It is alleged the amount now due is approximately $250,000 and a judgment for this amount and an order of sale on foreclosure is asked. The sum-mones are returnable on December 14.
Father James Shea, who has charge of a Catholic church at Henryville, Clark county, Ind., yesterday asked for a complaint and prosecuting attorney in the case of the State of Indiana against Charles Ferguson, who was charged with hunting without a license, hunting with a loaded gun and being a hunter when a demand was made on him to do so. The hearing was before Magistrate Alexander Neville, at Henryville, yesterday afternoon, and he said 250 persons were present. The defendant was dismissed for lack of evidence.
Ferguson, who is a minor, was arrested several days on a complaint made by a deputy fish and game warden. The case was tried before Jeffersonville yesterday morning before Judge Harry C. Montgomery in the Clark Circuit Court. The defendant was present, but George C. Kopp, prosecuting attorney, dismissed the action. Information was filed immediately in the Circuit Court, the prosecuting witness being John J. Brovey, a deputy game warden. Ferguson was arrested in the sum of $200, with H. W. Phipps and James R. Ferguson, the latter his father, as security.
Another feature is that Dr. Claude C.
Crum and been filed before Magistrate Neville several days ago and he refused to dismiss this after surgery last evening, and the suit was filed in the Circuit Court yesterday morning. Montgomery and he pleaded not guilty. H. W. Phipps, attorney for Ferguson, notified Magistrate Neville that he was not a good showing. It was shown by Ferguson that he was on his way to the home of William Stuart to attempt to get a gun and that he was not attempting to hunt. It was also brought out that he had been granted a local hunter's license on the 10th of November, but it had not been delivered to him.
Makes Recommendation.
Acting on a suggestion of Mayor Edward N. Flynn, James E. Burke, who is to become Mayor of Jeffersonville on January 3, yesterday recommended Dr.
Claude C. Crum for appointment as members of the City Board of Health to fill the vacancies occasioned by the death of Dr. William H. Sheets and the resignation of Dr. David Cohen. The appointments were made, but it is said Dr.
Crum is the only physician in Jeffersonville who is not now acting in some official capacity who is eligible to be secretary of the board, and he will be appointed. Under a new law those appointed as secretary of a board of health must have had previous experience or have stood an examination. Dr. Crum recently stood an examination at Indianapolis. The board will require that the secretary must be a member of the board. This will make the place open for Dr. Crum, who is a Republican.

When The Stomach Stops Working Properly, Because There Is Wind In It, Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to Set It Going Again.
A Trial Box Free.
THE DOCTORS call it flatulency, but unprofessional folks know it as "wind on the stomach," and a most distressing condition of the system. It is a serious condition of this great motor organ. Always annoying and embarrassing, it is easily and quickly cured by the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. The tablets are made of a food properly and indigestion follows,
and this has a train too appalling to enumerate. The active principle of the tablets made an active or passive factor in this trouble and life soon becomes a question.
ALL THIS IS EXPLAINED in doctor books, however, and the tablets are made of a food properly and indigestion follows,
and this has a train too appalling to enumerate. The active principle of the tablets made an active or passive factor in this trouble and life soon becomes a question.
The board of directors will be elected at a special meeting Wednesday night, when a large attendance is expected. There will be six directors.

Joint Sessions by Har-

Judges and barristers paused for a few minutes yesterday morning before the work of joint session was taken up to do honor to the memory of the late Maj. D. W. Sanders. Hardin H. Herr, representing a committee named to draft resolutions, read a brief eulogy and a sketch of the career of Maj. Sanders. An interesting coincidence was mentioned by Judge Miller decided in favor of Maj. Sanders in the notable escheat case. The committee which drew up the resolutions was composed of Hon. J. D.
Newcomb, chairman, Lytle Buchanan, Joseph M. Huffaker, J. W. S.

Sheets, who died in Jeffersonville a few days ago, was read Friday night, but was not offered for probate yesterday.
It is provided in the writing that everything owned by Dr. Sheets at the time of his death is to go to the Preachers' Aid Society. There is a provision, however, that Miss Laura Thompson, who was the housekeeper for Dr. Sheets for twelve years, is to have a life interest in part of the estate. It is requested that a cottage be built on the lot owned by Dr. Sheets for Miss Thompson, and in this she is to make her home and have the rent free as long as she lives.
It is understood the estate is worth between $5,000 and $10,000, which the court will appraise. The property that was mortgaged to the Preachers' Aid Society for at least one-fourth of this morning. The records at the courthouse in Jeffersonville show that a mortgage for $700 was filed on October 9, 1909. The subject of the mortgage was Dr. Sheets for some time. The will was written some time after the death of Dr. Sheets.

SHOT HIMSELF IN WEST-END SALOON

WILLIAM McNALLY, CANDY-MAKER, NOT EXPECTED TO RECOVER FROM WOUND.

William McNally, 25 years of age, shot and probably fatally wounded himself yesterday afternoon in DeLaney's saloon, at Eighteenth and Market streets. Several men who were in the saloon saw the act and rushed to his side as he fell. He was removed to the city hospital, where an operation was performed in the hope of saving his life. The physicians say, however, that his case is hopeless, as the walls of the intestines have been punctured.
McNally walked into DeLaney's saloon and called for a drink. It was given him and after drinking it he reached in his pocket and pulled out a small revolver of the "bull-dog" variety.
Muttering incoherently about a love affair, he placed the gun to his side and fired. He fell to the floor in a pool of blood.
Capt. Ludwig and several patrolmen rushed to the scene and called the city hospital ambulance. McNally was placed in the ambulance and hurried to the city hospital, where it was found that his case was hopeless, but the doctors decided to operate in the bare hope of saving his life.
McNally lives at 631 Second street and is a candymaker. He is married and has a wife and one child.

HANDSOME SUM

Realized by Those In Charge of Doll Bazar.

MORE THAN $2,000 FOR CHILDREN'S FREE HOSPITAL.

BUSY SCENES AT WOMAN'S CLUB YESTERDAY.

CHILDREN VISIT THE SHOW.

The doll bazar that was held at the Woman's Club yesterday was a success. More than $2,000 in clear money—the kind that doesn't make a dull sound when dropped on a counter—was taken in. To say that the members of the Hospital Circle of the Children's Free Hospital are delighted is putting it mildly. As early as 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon the women in charge of the affair declared that this year's doll bazar surpassed anything that they have given for the Children's Free Hospital.

Along about half past 2 o'clock, when the bazar was in full blast, with all available floor space occupied by tables, small children and women's gown trains, and the Punch and Judy show, and the Lick emporium were operating at one and the same time, the tout ensemble gave a vivid impression of a national convention of dressmakers or a ward primary of women politicians—regular busy bee act. Many a musical feminine voice was soon almost to a shadow after two hours of the bazar, and by the middle of the afternoon folks just made signs to indicate their wants. Of course, there was no special racket, just the jolly, good humored or soft voices in untrained chorus. Everybody was there, that is most everybody—for it's going to sound pretty nifty for the dainty maid and matron to draw to her caller: "Yes, you know, I was out at the doll bazar and I'm just worn to a frazzle, actually."

Ideal Arrangement.

To make even a feeble attempt to describe the way things were arranged, the decorations, the things on sale and all, would be futile. Everything looked very pleasing and alluring, and salaries were originally placed to show to excellent advantage, but by 3 o'clock they were slightly mused up.

The women who were in charge of the entertainment, which meant the Punch and Judy show, were so financially successful that they were elated to a high degree. In past years there has been a series of tableaux, but this year it was, for by 3 o'clock there was not much left to eat. The supply of food had been exhausted completely. This department cleared about $300.

What was said to have been the most remarkable result was the great number of sales at the table for desk and traveling supplies. This department was in charge of the members of the Junior Hospital Circle, and these women took in more than $500. The best previous record of this department was $135, the sum resulting from the sales last year.

What Each Took In.

The dressed doll table took in $200; delicatessen table, $165; fancy work table, $225; handkerchief table, $60; candy table, $100; the grab bag, $35; doll supply table, $175; the table for goods not more than $1 in price, $130, and the souvenir brick stand, $40. There were 1,130 paid admissions, amounting to $113.50.

One of the pleasing things about the whole business was the visit of several of the children from the free hospital with Miss Laura Wilson, the superintendent. Obviously, these little invalids do not often have the opportunity to revel in a material fairyland, and it was just fine to watch them "go to it." They were the belles and beaux of the ball, and the women folk vied to shower attentions on the youngsters.

When the bazar came to a close at about 5 o'clock the women said that the stock had been more completely sold out this year than ever before. They are thankful to everyone who has contributed in any degree toward the success of the charity.

CITY HOSPITAL IS CONDEMNED

Scathing Arraignment by Grand Jury.

"City That Has Stood Still," Term Applied.

County Poorhouse and Other Institutions

RAKED OVER THE COALS.

"That it makes better provisions for its malefactors in its jails than for the poor unfortunates huddled in its superannuated hospital bespeaks not a city of progress, as its great seal proudly boasts, but marks Louisville in this respect, which should be its chief concern, as the city that has stood still."

This was the way in which the November grand jury, when it adjourned sine die yesterday, indicted Louisville. Much else that was not especially complimentary was said of some of the county and city institutions in the special report of that body, of which Philip S. Tuley was foreman. The jail, School of Reform and the Lick Asylum are warmly praised. The county's poorhouse, near Jefferson-town; the city's almshouse, the workhouse and the courthouse all come in for uncomplimentary attention. Lastly the city hospital is scored, or rather the city is scored for letting it remain as it is. It is in reference to the hospital that the grand jury employed the opening sentence.

New City Hospital Imperative.

"The reference to the city hospital as follows, the observations as to the other charitable institutions having preceded it:

It is perhaps superfluous to say that this condition is a hundredfold worse at the city hospital. The venerable building, crumbling to decay, after being in use for three generations of the city's sick, disabled and unfortunate, is kept as clean as possible and its inmates cared for with as much comfort as the buildings will permit. The development of modern hospital design and practice has left Louisville's facilities so far in the rear that the institution has become a reproach and a disgrace to the community.

That it makes better provisions for its malefactors in its jails than for the poor unfortunates huddled in its superannuated hospital bespeaks not a city of progress, as its great seal proudly boasts, but marks Louisville in this respect, which should be its chief concern, as the City That Has Stood Still. Efforts to remodel and renovate a hospital which has been in use nearly three-quarters of a century would be as impossible as this would be absurd. Entire replacement of the buildings is imperative and further postponement of this drastic remedy will be a disgrace to the community.

Reform In Felony System.

This November grand jury has been in session for twenty-seven days and has returned 138 indictments and dismissed seventy-one cases. The portion of the latter is larger than usual, and the reasons were given in its special report in the middle of the term. Abuse of the prevailing system of felony fees was blamed then and is blamed now for the great number of the cases that the grand jury forced to consider. As to this point the report reads as follows:

It is not an open proper punishment could have been inflicted at the examining trial. The Police Court is to facilitate the administration of justice and avoid heavy expense to city and county.

State Salary For Police Judge.

It would seem to resolve the grand jury that a salary of $1,000 per annum for the investigation of so many petty, flimsy cases of mere misdemeanors that it may not be in the interest of the city to have a police judge. A fixed, adequate salary for the judge, instead of the present system, subject to increase contingent upon the finding of indictments in cases held for trial, would be a better method of the evil of which we complain. It would further help if the same sort of conditional rewards to retiring officers were abolished.

Perquisites such as these fees should not be needed to induce a police officer to perform his duties. Neither should the judicial mind be clouded by the thought of a possible reward to him should the grand jury with that duty, which primarily belongs to him, he should himself perform.

Criticism For Other Places.

Whoever drafted the report knows how to use severe words and how to frame a sentence. As to the County Poorhouse the report says: "And we believe that few of our citizens know that there is such an institution," says the report in its dreary, dismal and dangerous. It is located in Jefferson-town. The recommendation is made that the county make some arrangement with the city to care for the unfortunates there. The "dependent" quartered there live in "daily danger" of burning to death in a "conflagration which, once started, would wipe out the whole of the closely-grouped, combustible buildings."

As to the Almshouse, it "has much to wish for in its physical condition, notably in the makeshift furnishings of the dining-room and its contracted facilities for dairy and bakery. Otherwise its management is good, and it seems to us," the report continues, "that here the County Poorhouse by inmates could be cared for by some arrangement with the city and county for per capita maintenance, at least until such time as safe, modern and comfortable buildings could be erected in place of the present one, which is an ostentatious humane community. The people simply do not know how sordid, mean and meager are the conditions surrounding the unfortunate dependent upon the county, otherwise improvements would not long be delayed."

The Workhouse comes in for some attention. It is scored, as an instance of the best possible use made of buildings unfit for their purposes.

Says the report: "Films construction of wood where metal or concrete is in modern buildings absolutely essential to safety, to sanitation and to freedom from fire. The darkness, wretchedness and the use of disinfectants to overcome the mustiness of the atmosphere, the darkness where light should exist to make cleanliness and health possible—all of these mark another country institution whose structures have outlived their usefulness."

Much Need of Witness Rooms.

The courthouse did not escape criticism. The building is in good condition, the report has it, "but is with-

This Free Remedy

Helps Sickly Babies

Babies and children suffer mostly from the stomach. There is something wrong with the milk or with the eggs or with the minor articles of food, for it doesn't take much to disturb a child's stomach. One letter addressed to me says: "I am sure of and that is that no harm can come from giving a small dose of a mild laxative, for it is sure to be better off for it. You know your own feeling of lightness and ease when that function has been performed. So much more important is it to the child?

Watch carefully that your child does not have at least one of two movements of the bowels each day. It is considered. From constipation comes headache, a feeling of oppression, bad breath, nausea, sour stomach, and in the troubles you can obtain nothing better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Give

it in the small doses prescribed for chil-

BIBLICAL INSTITUTE OF THE CHURCH OF ROME INSTITUTES FIRST YEAR'S COURSE

Eleven Jesuits Chosen From Nine Provinces of the Order as the Teaching Staff—An Interesting Discovery.

(Contributed by the International Catholic Truth Society.)

New York, Dec. 4.—The Biblical Institute has begun its first year's course of studies, with a teaching staff of eleven Jesuits chosen from nine provinces of the order, as follows:

Andrea Fernandez, of the province of Aragon, will teach the exegesis of certain portions of the Hebrew text of Scripture, history of the Hebrews from Samuel to Solomon and a question of exegesis of the Old Testament, viz., Messianism.

Antonio Delmel, province of Germany; Aramaic language, history and geography of Assyria and Babylonia, and the relations between some of the cuneiform texts and the Bible.

Enrico Gismonti, province of Rome; the Aramaic (Syrian and Chaldean) language and Arabic.

Enrico Rosa, province of Turin; Biblical Greek.

Herman van Laak, province of Germany; inspiration and inerrancy of the Sacred Books.

Leopold Fonck, province of Austria; introduction to portions of the New Testament and exegesis of selected texts, method and literary aids for the study of Sacred Books and Gospel history.

Ladislav Szozepanski, province of Galicia; Biblical geography and archaeology and a higher course of Hebrew.

Lipo Murillo, province of Castile, exegesis of the Greek text and of the difficulties in the study of Sacred Scripture.

Lucien Mechineau, provinces of France; general introduction to the Bible, and special introduction to the Pentateuch, and to the didactic books of the Old Testament, and the exegesis of the Psalms.

Mario Chaine, province of Lyons; the Coptic language.

Finally, the prefect of the Vatican library, Francis Ehrle, will give conferences in the institute on paleography relating to the Bible.

Variety of Subjects.

The different subjects are proposed in such abundance and variety that the students may make their selection according to the special needs and tastes of each. The lessons are to be supplemented by practical exercises, oral or written, on the part of the students, so that they may become practically familiar with scientific work.

It is expected that the first great work to be undertaken by all the professors, students and friends of the institute will be a bibliography of all the literature relating to biblical science, not merely of this or that nation, but of all throughout the world.

This biblical bibliography will investigate the labors of past ages; and thus prepare the way for a history of exegesis during every age. And, as a great part of this history lies still hidden in manuscript codices, it will be possible to derive from it a rich abundance of texts and commentaries. This again will contribute to throw more and more light on the sacred text itself, to furnish matter for critical studies on the true form of the text, and for deeper investigation of the sense of the Divine Word.

Biblical Seminary.

Again, for the practical use of the clergy and of theologians, the professors of the institute are preparing a biblical summary, or brief exposition of the results obtained and the problems to be solved in the vast field of biblical studies.

The rules will be that each one is to cultivate his own portion of the sacred vineyard by his own positive and personal labor; and thus seek for the best defense for the cause of truth and the common good of many.

The scholastic year extends from November 5 to June 20.

Work of Fur Traders.

The Rev. Francis J. Schaefer, of the St. Paul Seminary, has given, in "Acta et Dicta," the official organ of the St. Paul Catholic Historical Society, in Minnesota, an interesting account of the religious work accomplished by the itinerant fur traders, Radisson and Groenlitters.

It gives special publicity to the fact that the first chapel erected in Minnesota was built by these explorers, on Prairie Island, in Lake Pepin, near Red Wing, during their first visit to Minnesota, in 1655-56.

Incidentally it goes to show that the missionary activity within the confines of Minnesota was inaugurated neither by Jesuit nor by Recollet, but owes its origin to the lay evangel of these simple voyageurs. According to all evidences, it was the custom, among the voyageurs of New France, to administer the sacrament of baptism in all cases of necessity, particularly to children.

It is said that during their first expedition, Radisson and Groenlitters baptized about 300 little children. Again, in 1659-60, they passed the winter on the shores of Lake Superior, and were fortunate enough to baptize 200 little children of the Algonquin nation, with whom they first made their abode. These children were the victims of disease and famine; and, in the simple words of the Jesuit relations, "they went straight to heaven, dying soon after baptism."

Looking To Rome.

According to a most interesting communication in the Paris Univers, written by a former Russian "pope," Nicola Tolstoi, himself a convert to the Catholic Church—the schismatic episcopate of Georgia in Transcaucasia, is looking toward Rome as their natural protector in their episcopal rights and duties.

The Georgian Church was annexed to the Russian Church about a century ago, resulting in the loss of much of the independence hitherto enjoyed. After the publication of the Imperial ukase of 1865 the Georgians thought the time had come for regaining their independence and having their own national primate. But, instead, a pretext has been found for abolishing their ecclesiastical province and making their six dioceses directly dependent upon the Holy Synod.

The Georgians are now determined to resist this violation of the ukase guaranteeing liberty of conscience in Russia. Bishop doerrient and apostrophe declare with one accord that they wish "to submit to the Roman pontiff, who is the head of the Universal Church."

They have learned to contrast the spiritual rule of Russia with the practice of the Roman See, which has always been in the hands of a few, and respect all national customs and sentiments which do not conflict with the purity of the faith.

Great Linguist.

Mgr. Rahmani, the Syrian Patriarch of Antioch, who has just had an audience with the pope, is one of the greatest linguists in the world now. He knows thoroughly at least ten languages: Arabic, Syriac, Turkish, Greek, Latin, Italian, French, German, English and Hebrew, and his extraordinary proficiency has been turned to good account in researches into ancient Oriental Christian literature.

Among his discoveries is that of a most interesting document, an apostrophe, the "Testamentum Jesu Christi," frequently referred to in its Greek text, and in various versions by ancient writers; but hitherto unknown to modern scholarship only by some fragments preserved in a Latin codex of the Thirteenth century.

The patriarch has published a critical edition of the codex found by him, which dates from the year 638.

The patriarch's discovery has had much to do with modifying modern judgments on the chronology and geographical dependence of some of the most important apocrypha of the Christian literature of the first centuries.

Among the 150 unedited codices in the library he has collected is a Syrian version of the "Cronicon" of Eusebius, which has been useful in correcting the Armenian version in several points. For instance, this latter version puts the duration of the Roman pontificate of St. Peter at twenty years, whereas Mgr. Rahmani's codex gives the traditional period of twenty-five years, thus agreeing with St. Jerome, who gives the facts and figures from the "Cronicon."

Italians For Fields.

The Very Rev. Don Pietro Pisani, professor of philosophy in the Seminary of Vercelli, Italy, has come to America as the representative of a federation of Italian societies, and with the approval of the Italian Government and the support of Pius X., to promote a movement for guiding the stream of Italian immigrants away from the larger cities to the agricultural districts of this country and Canada.

Father Pisani says: "We seek both to get the resident Italians of the big cities interested in agriculture and to persuade future emigrants from Italy to go to the country rather than to the big cities. The result of our endeavors undoubtedly will be that large numbers of Italians will become American farmers."

Considerable progress has already been made in getting Italians to turn to agriculture, and the movement is expected to gather enormous headway as it grows older and better organized.

Meanwhile Mgr. Carlo Petrucci, another Italian priest, has been sent to Australia by the Society of the Missionaries for Emigration to study the conditions of Italian emigrants in that country.

Vote To Gain Alliance.

The Polish Catholic Union, having a membership of 45,000, at its recent convention in Cleveland, voted to join the Polish Alliance of Unity, an organization that will attempt to effect a combination of all Polish societies in America.

The Alliance will seek to build and maintain higher schools of learning, to establish chairs of Polish language and literature in American universities, to better the educational system of the Polish schools, to encourage the desire for an education among Polish-American youth by instituting libraries and free lectures in the Polish settlements of all large cities, and to establish a home for immigrants in New York and other parts, together with an employment agency. The latter, under the direction of the Alliance, will endeavor to send the Polish immigrants to the country instead of into the city.

Louis Pinderick, a Chicago attorney who attended the convention, remarked: "The Poles have always been an agricultural people. We want them to stay away from the great American cities and to take up farming."

Sanctification of Father Leo.

So many wonders are being ascribed to the intervention of Father Leo, who was assassinated some time ago in Denver, that the church authorities are holding an official inquiry, which may lead to the introduction of his cause of beatification at Rome.

EGYPTIAN MUMMY GOES TO YALE UNIVERSITY.

Scholars Expected To Determine Which Rameses It Is That Anson Phelps Stokes Owns.

New York, Dec. 4.—A distinguished Egyptian of uncertain identity arrived today in the hold of the steamship Aragona from Suez and Port Said. He is believed to be either one of the Rameses or a high official of one of the Rameses dynasty. At present he is housed as 900 pounds of freight in the cargo of the steamship.

Harold Stokes purchased the mummy, said to be at least 3,000 years old, in Egypt and shipped it to his brother, Anson Phelps Stokes, secretary of Yale University. At New Haven the cedar chest will be opened and Egyptologists expect to determine its identity and historical standing of the mummy by the writings and wrappings incased with it.

NINE BATTLESHIPS IN PORT AT NORFOLK, VA.

Jackies, 2,000 Strong, Given Shore Liberty and Enjoy Life In the City.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 4.—The battleships Connecticut, Missouri, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Georgia and Kansas came into Hampton Roads to-day. Two thousand men, given their first liberty since the beginning of the fleet rendezvous in these waters, visited Norfolk.

Most of the ships came in from the Southern drill grounds where tactical evolutions had been in progress for several days. The scout cruiser Chester is also in the rendezvous where all of the ships are receiving stores and from the Norfolk Navy Yard. The battleships Rhode Island, Vermont and cruiser New York are next expected.

BIG WHALE TRAPPED IN BAY BY FALLING TIDE

Sixty Feet In Length and Eighteen In Diameter.

New Orleans, Dec. 4.—News of the capture yesterday of a large whale Center Point Bay, below Boras, Plaquemine parish, was received to-day. The big mammal was 60 feet long and eighteen feet in diameter.

The whale entered the bay from the gulf during high tide and was unable to get out when the water went down. He was found almost smothered in the mud, in a dying condition. Fifty barrels of oil have been taken from the monster and it is estimated that these will bring $400 or $500.

ACCIDENTS, FATAL AND OTHERWISE, INCREASE

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 4.—An increase fatal accidents on the railroad lines in Pennsylvania in October is attributed the expansion of freight traffic due to the improvement in business conditions. During October 199 persons were killed, an increase of thirty-three over the number of fatal accidents in October of last year when not so many trains were run. This is a corresponding increase in non-fatal accidents.

At the Casino.
English history furnishes the material for the chief offering on the half-week programme introduced at the Casino Theater to-day. In vivid and dramatic scenes is sketched a stirring tale of the days of Oliver Cromwell and his persistent persecution of the adherents of Catholicism. Under the title of "The Death Disc," the tale relates the plight of three soldiers accused of adhering to the Church of Rome and the punishments by lot that are decreed by the stern Protector of the English Commonwealth. A feature that will vie with this story in popular interest is called "An Indian Wife's Devotion," and is a vehicle for the introduction of whirlwind riding and the sensational elements that make for the success of the Western drama.

SOCIAL EVENTS

In Frankfort During Holidays Promise Much.

CALENDAR FULL OF RECEPTIONS, TEAS AND GERMAN.

D. A. R. FORM NEW CHAPTER AT CAPITAL.

HOME-COMING OF STUDENTS.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)
Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 4.—Thanksgiving week was a time of a break in the dullness. We were thankful for the rich harvests of social doings and well be still more thankful if they will continue till the next holiday gives us additional food for subjects.

Everybody is waiting to give their big powwows during the two holiday weeks at Christmas time when all the girls and all the boys will be coming home from college.

The majority of these students will arrive on December 13 and the calendar will be full of dates for receptions, teas and german.

There is but one drop of bitterness in our cups at this time—the plentiful lack of beaux. If we could import a lot of good-looking men who are warranted to dance well and less german we'd have Thanksgiving all over again.

In Compliment of Louisville Woman.

Mrs. Patty Semple, of Louisville, is the guest of Mrs. William E. Bradley. There have been several entertainments for this charming Louisville visitor. Chief among them were the two neighborhood parties.

Mrs. Bradley entertained her visitor on Saturday evening with a "neighborhood party" at her home on Washington street. Giant white and yellow chrysanthemums and smilax were used in the decorations. During the evening a delicious supper was served to about twenty-five guests.

Then Mrs. Elizabeth Pepper and her two daughters, Misses Laura and Elizabeth Pepper, were the hostesses for the "neighborhood party" in Mrs. Semple's honor. Mrs. Pepper's home was decorated with chrysanthemums, lilies of the valley and roses for the occasion. Here another delicious supper was served, and as for all that talk about "conversation being a lost art," this function destroyed every vestige of such an illusion.

Mr. Edmund Taylor's Birthday.

This idea of celebrating one's birthday among "children of larger growth," is on the increase. On Tuesday evening Mrs. C. W. Hay, one of the recent charming additions to the colony of "newly-weds," entertained her brother's friends at her cozy home, on Capitol avenue. The decorations were pink and white carnations and the tables were set with silver candlesticks were also in pink.

Not the least of these appointments was the big birthday cake with twenty-three twinkling tapers to give the secret away.

The young women invited came in the afternoon and played bridge. At five the sterner sex came and all were served the most appetizing of suppers in buffet style. Some eighty guests called during the evening.

For Senator and Mrs. Paynter.

Mrs. Jennie C. Morton entertained Senator and Mrs. T. H. Paynter on Tuesday evening with a delightful dinner, before they left on the evening train for Washington City, where they will spend the winter. Mrs. Pollock, the mother of Mrs. Paynter, went with them and they will be joined a bit later by their son, Mr. Pollock Paynter, who is at present in the West.

Mrs. Morton's dinner was served in most tempting style and the decorations were in red carnations.

The Frankfort Chapter D. A. R.'s

Frankfort is going to have a chapter of the American Daughters of the Revolution. This organization has been in existence for eighteen years and while being talked of often, a local chapter here has never materialized.

During the last State meeting here of the D. A. R.'s, Mrs. Sam Shackelford was urged to be regent of the new chapter. Last week in compliment to Mrs. Shackelford, Mrs. C. D. Chaul, State regent of the Lexington chapter; Mrs. Milton Durham, vice president; general-elect of the national organization; Miss Julia Spurr, regent of the Lexington chapter; Miss Elizabeth Lile, treasurer of the Lexington chapter; and Mrs. James S. Helm, a prominent D. A. R., came down in Mrs. Helm's big car and made Mrs. Shackelford regent of the new chapter here.

While no name has definitely been decided upon, the name will in all probability be the "Susan Hart" chapter. It has had several names suggested, notable among them the name of the "William Lindsey" chapter, in honor of William Lindsey, Jr. But, it was understood, the by-laws governing the names revealed the fact that no name was to be selected that had lived prior to 1820 (it may be a bit mistaken in the date). That would let out a great many otherwise eligible.

In honor of the new regent, Mrs. Chaul suggested that it be named "The Susan Hart" chapter. Mrs. Hart, who married Kentucky's first Governor, Isaac Shelby, was the first lady of the State and is the great-grand-mother of Mrs. Shackelford, who is also the great-granddaughter of Gov. Beriah Magoffin.

Susanna Hart came here and was mistress of the log mansion at the foot of what is now Broadway. Together with her husband she braved the perils of pioneer days and dispensed all the hospitality at hand.

The meeting was preliminary. Mrs. Shackelford has the right to appoint her officers and as yet has not made her state. Mrs. Shackelford as regent will give to the chapter the dignity and diplomacy that her great-grand-mother did to the log cabin mansion in the pioneer days of the Dark and Bloody Ground.

For Miss Agnes Orr.

Miss Virginia Nunn gave a beautiful reception last Friday afternoon for her handsome young guest, Miss Agnes Orr, of Princeton, Ky. The house was artistically decorated for the occasion in a profusion of yellow chrysanthemums and smilax.

The centerpiece for the round table was in the chrysanthemums, and circling this were a row of yellow tapers, which were also circled by a wreath of smilax.

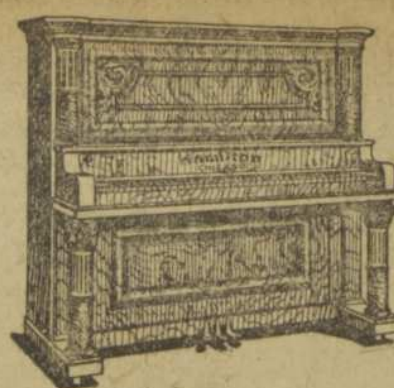

The mantel and the chandeliers were draped with the yellow flowers.

Miss Nunn received with her guest. Miss Orr wore a beautiful gown of white embroidered marquisette and Miss Orr's gown was a lovely blue chiffon cloth. Both carried American Beauty roses.

Miss Jennie Farris Bailey, Miss Marie Lockett, Miss Marie Wilkins, Miss Mary Belle Hobson, Miss Virginia Gray and Mrs. C. W. Hay assisted the hostess in serving about eighty guests a delicious buffet luncheon.

For Virginia Guest.

giving dinner at her magnificent country home, "Scotland," last week for her guest, Miss Bouldin, of Richmond, Va. The house was brilliant with a profusion of pink chrysanthemums and ferns. About twenty young people enjoyed bridge and a delightful dinner.

For Miss Gayle.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hoge entertained Thanksgiving night with a star party at his country home. The house was gay with red carnations and a menu was served that defied the chef of the Astoria. About fifteen guests were present to enjoy the Thanksgiving spread.

Welcome Visitors.

Mrs. Caswell Bennett and her handsome young daughter, Miss Virginia Bennett, who have but lately arrived in this country from a year's stay abroad, are at present the guests of Mrs. L. C. Norman and family, on Ann street. Mrs. Bennett and her daughter have visited friends in New York City and Washington since their return and have been given a royal welcome.

Miss Bennett studied in Berlin, in Lucerne and in France, and will, in all probability, return next fall to continue her studies.

Mrs. Bennett and her daughter are both at home here—where they spent many years during Judge Caswell Bennett's life.

Mrs. Bennett is one of the wittiest women and the best raconteurs in the State. They are on their way to Louisville.

Mrs. Carroll's Luncheon.

Mrs. J. D. Carroll gave a beautiful luncheon-bridge last Thursday for her sisters, Mrs. David Castleman and Mrs. L. M. Sandford, of Crescent Hill, and Miss Martha Sandford, of New Castle.

This was decidedly the brightest function of the week in Frankfort social circles. Mrs. Carroll's pretty home was rich with blossoms of pink chrysanthemums, pink carnations and ferns.

The luncheon that preceded the game was beautifully served, and the table decorations were in pink. The candles, mints and the ices were also in this rosy scheme.

The prices for the bridge players were a silver picture frame, a silver filigree vase and a cut-glass mayonnaise bowl. Some thirty guests were out to this enjoyable party clad in their new winter's stunning frocks.

Santa Claus Factory That Is Run By a Woman.

THIS Christmas season of 1909 sees the twentieth anniversary of a remarkable individual effort toward helpfulness and happiness. On the day after Christmas, 1889, Miss Sallie Stutsman, of Dayton, Ohio, had her attention called through personal investigation to the bareness of some homes during this season. Realizing that in the future no child of poverty in her neighborhood, or in the city at large, should be left unwarmed by the Christmas spirit, she has bent her energies all these years to playing Santa Claus with such effect that her work has become one of the permanent agencies for happiness in the community.

Miss Stutsman's plan has two things to recommend it, secrecy and simplicity. Of the hundreds of children whom she has made happy, not one ever suspected the name of the giver. She began by sending not only useful but distinctly attractive presents to a few children in her neighborhood, using her own not unlimited means. Then the demands grew, as she found the unspeakable happiness produced by so little outlay, and the longer she continued, the more she found that the children were not only grateful for the presents, but that they were also learning to be content with what they had. They were learning to be content with what they had, and to be content with what they had, and to be content with what they had.

Everyone who saw, wanted to help, and offers in increasing numbers poured in as the years grew, offers of money, of mechanical skill, of toys new and old. Miss Stutsman accepted all, but never once asked. Her friends' carriages were kept busy Christmas eve from 4 o'clock until 11 delivering packages.

Care is taken to find out who the children are, what their ages and what they want. Miss Stutsman's aides and aides are the school teachers, the district nurses, the policemen and the Women's Christian Association ward workers. They know the children, even the poor, who will pass some kind of Christmas celebration, and they know the children who will have none. And these are the ones Miss Stutsman is after.

In 1891 fifty children were given a treat at an outlay of sixteen dollars. Each child had a half pound of pure candy, an orange, a bag of peanuts and some toys appropriate to his age. If a boy loved to read, he got a book. If he was "crazy for roller skates," he found them in his stocking. If a girl had never had a doll, there it was with clothes that would come off and go on, a doll which became in itself a lesson in tidiness, since hands must be kept clean to handle so gorgeous a being.

In 1892 Miss Stutsman had $27 in cash and enough toys to make Christmas for 127 children. Although done so quietly, news of her work spread among her friends, who began to put down her claim as among the first when the spirit began to work. One sent a check, another offered a carriage for delivering, some came to do duty for weeks dressing dolls in the workrooms, and other's spent long, laborious evenings helping verify lists and the packages. Many of these were high school boys and girls who came out of school hours, putting in their scanty leisure under her direction. One girl 12 years old dressed a dozen dolls. During January sales, orders for the dolls, buys silk remnants in August, and dresses the pretty babies all through September, October and November. When it is learned that twenty-five dozen dolls were ordered last year for this Christmas of 1909 it may be surmised that the work of clothing them must take many weeks. The dolls are always dressed in light clothes—suits if possible—with gay ribbons and lace. A doll in gingham is never sent to one of Miss Stutsman's children—it is the gingham side of life that is theirs, the silk side that they want.

If Stutsman stands as the unknown benefactor, she does not lack testimony of the joy her work has brought into empty little lives. From doctors, visiting nurses, policemen and teachers come stories of the transformation of the lives of little children who hold the first toy all their own. Truant boys have been reformed by a book, feeble patients have gone quickly to sleep with a dolly held close, a crippled boy spent radiant days with a set of pyrography tools, an unruly girl kept out of mischief by a sewing basket well supplied.

Last year 60 children in Dayton had a visit from Santa Claus. This year the returns are not yet in.

House and Scenes Connected With Dr. Ephraim McDowell, One of Kentucky's Most Famous Surgeons

MONUMENT ERECTED IN McDOWELL PARK IN DANVILLE, KY., BY THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION IN 1879 IN MEMORY OF DR. EPHRAIM McDOWELL.

Danville, Ky., Dec. 4.—(Special).—With the danger of a charge of murder being registered against him if he failed of success, Dr. Ephraim McDowell 100 years ago Thursday, December 9, 1909, performed the first successful operation for ovariotomy in a modest two-story frame house on Second street, this city. The patient was a Mrs. Crawford, and she died at the age of 79 years, thirty-two years after the operation was performed.

The old building used as an office and residence by Dr. McDowell still stands and bears evidence of the ravages of time. It is now used as a tenement house and, according to local history, is 125 years old.

Centennial of Operation.

"The McDowell Medical Society," of Cincinnati, has had several representatives in Danville recently gathering information for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the operation by the physicians who are members of the Ohio organization which was formed in memory of the great surgeon. Local tradition has it that an angry mob awaited outside Dr. McDowell's office door, enraged over his undertaking and fully believing that it would mean certain death to his patient. The operation was performed on the belly, the animal was preparing for the forward leap, and the second was at the end of the impulse, when, with a sudden jerk, the animal was ready to take the ground again for another stride. Both of these periods, it will be seen, were the instants of arrest of motion—instants when the human eye could readily see the action without the aid of the camera. Then at last was perceived the fundamental law which underlies the phenomena of the eye and the human brain behind it declined to accept as a symbol of motion anything less than a series of still pictures, and by itself unaided. In this case, of course, it was only during the two instants of arrest of motion that the eye was able to note the position of the animal's limbs. And then, two positions of the animal, became to the permanent camera a single picture. The eye, however, saw the animal in the middle of the leap, and the eye would have seen of the very beginning of the stride, when, with all four legs nunched together

Unveiled In 1879.

When in 1879 the monument to the memory of Dr. McDowell was unveiled in this city the Governor of the State, officers of the State and National Medical Associations were the chief speakers. The movement to erect the monument was begun by the late Dr. John D. Jackson, whose death occurred shortly thereafter. Dr. L. S. McDowell, then of Danville, now of Louisville, took the work up where Dr. Jackson quit and pushed it to its most successful conclusion. One of the many addresses was delivered by Dr. Sayre, president of the American Medical Association, and in part he said:

"It is my official capacity it is my duty as well as my pleasure to bring to the monument the ovations of the entire medical profession of these United States. And I venture here the prediction that in all times to come the intelligent surgeons either in person or in thought from every part of the civilized globe will wander here to Danville to pay their respects and sense of obligation to the memory of Ephraim McDowell, who has contributed more to the alleviation of human suffering and the prolongation of human life than any other member of the medical profession in the Nineteenth century."

Tribute To McDowell's Genius.

"We can scarcely comprehend the greatness of this man's mind and the truly wonderful genius of McDowell, until we stop to consider whom he was, what he did and when and where he did it. A village doctor, in the backwoods of Kentucky, surrounded by Indians and the buffalo, and almost beyond the bounds of civilization, no books to refer to, with no precedent to guide, with no one to consult but his own unaided judgment; with no one to share the responsibility of an unsuccessful operation, and with no one to share the responsibility of a successful one, he performed the operation which has been called the 'miraculous cure' of the ovariotomy."

CAMERA'S EYES SAW MORE.

(Scribner's Magazine.) When instantaneous photography was first discovered some thirty years ago, high hopes were entertained of it by the artists. It was thought, for instance, that it would prove of inestimable value to such painters as Meissonier and Schreyer, men who delighted to portray the horse in violent action. But to the surprise of everybody these great expectations were not realized. At first the artists themselves were puzzled to account for this, and to explain why the curiously colored photographs were subjected to a process of elimination and selection it was discovered that the camera was not able to see the horse in the middle of the leap, but that it saw the animal in the middle of the leap, and the eye would have seen of the very beginning of the stride, when, with all four legs nunched together at that time would have been pronounced correct by the entire medical profession throughout the civilized globe.

"All this he dared and did assume, because his clear intellect had reasoned out his plan of procedure and his careful dissections had pointed out to him the path to victory. And now every intelligent surgeon in the world is performing the operation as an occasion requires, until at the present time 40,000 years have already been added to the sum of human life by this one discovery of Ephraim McDowell."

Heroic Character of Woman.

"Another fact strikes me very forcibly, and that is the heroic character of the woman who permitted this extraordinary operation to be performed upon her. The women of Kentucky in that period of her early history were heroic and courageous, accustomed to brave the dangers of the tomahawk and scalping knife, and had more self-reliance and true heroism than is generally found in the more refined society of city life; and hence the courage of Mrs. Crawford, who, conscious that death was inevitable from the disease with which she suffered, so soon as this village doctor explained to her his plan of affording her relief and convinced her that it was feasible, immediately replied: 'Doctor, I am ready for the operation; please proceed at once and perform it.'"

EFFECT OF CHEAP TRAVEL.

(Literary Digest.) Are our powers of locomotion in danger of atrophy through disease? This would seem to be implied in an editorial note in the Lancet deprecating the increasing facilities for getting about. Says the writer: "Everybody must recognize the advantages of cheap traveling, and the competition among those who undertake to convey the public from place to place is such as to reduce the cost to a minimum. In many cases, indeed, it is stated that the public is practically carried for nothing. It is a temptation which continually confronts the public. It is not difficult to see in this a process which is calculated to lead to physical, and not improbably mental, deterioration. If a man reaches his home by train car or omnibus for a halfpenny he is not going to trouble himself about walking the distance. He thus loses, perhaps daily, a valuable and healthful form of exercise because traveling is so cheap. Surely this state of things cannot count for sturdiness and healthful activity in the future generation, but is more likely to lead to a state of atrophy which must react unfavorably on the individual. It is open to question whether the human race is better off in any state, a number of facilities which are constantly thrusting in its way every day of our lives, and hence the courage of Mrs. Crawford, who, conscious that death was inevitable from the disease with which she suffered, so soon as this village doctor explained to her his plan of affording her relief and convinced her that it was feasible, immediately replied: 'Doctor, I am ready for the operation; please proceed at once and perform it.'"

FISH THAT WALKS.

(London Standard.) A walking fish formed the subject of a recent address delivered before the Linnean Society in Sydney, New South Wales, by Mr. D. G. Stead. He showed a living specimen of the Anabas Scandens, a climbing perch, a fish of the order Anabasi, a very peculiar fish, but it possesses a wonderful leaf-like, laminae, organ, situated near the true gills, which it is enabled to breathe atmospheric

INSCRIBES VERSE TO ONE OF LOUISVILLE'S BELLES,

Requesting That the Tribute Be Published At His Death.

Even Louisville has its romances in real life, though often they do not come to light until after one has passed on to the other world. The death of the actor has passed forever from the stage of action. The death of a well-known man about a year ago recalls a beautiful instance of lifelong devotion that abided unto death. In early years he met Miss Fanny Castleman, one of the most beautiful and noblest women in the State and afterward one of the most popular society women in Kentucky, beloved as a woman not only of great beauty, but of splendid character and unusual attainments.

Thirty-one years rolled by and in the meantime Miss Castleman had become the wife of Capt. George B. Eastin, who had just come out of the Civil War covered with the glory of daring deeds done in battle for the Union. In 1864, Capt. Eastin had served under Gen. John H. Morgan, an idol of the Confederacy. He settled in Louisville, where he practiced the profession of law in which he distinguished himself. He was elected Circuit Judge and later judge of the bench of the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

The Louisville Camp of Confederate Veterans is named George B. Eastin Camp in his honor. Only one son was born to Judge Eastin and Mrs. Eastin. He died in 1896, and Mrs. Eastin now resides in St. Louis, Mo. It was after the death of Judge Eastin that Mrs. Eastin's friend of her early days saw her after a separation of thirty-one years. After the meeting he wrote a poem dedicated to her, and which he intended only to be published after his death. Some years ago he went to a friend, who is a well-known business man in the city, and left the poem with him, with the request that it be published after the writer's death. The writer died about a year ago, and the poem is now printed for the first time. It follows:

"Fannie Castleman."

I met her after one and thirty years,
 Time had wrought its changes there;
 Many her joys, bitter were her tears,
 The silver threads are in her hair.

I scanned her face expressive face,
 For traces of her younger days;
 I thought I could detect the grace
 Of her little winning ways.

As a girl she was stately and tall,
 A child and the woman blended;
 She met, wedded, then the pall,
 And her life was a sunny blend.

All this occurred since last we met,
 Is it strange I did not recall,
 Or passing strange I should forget,
 To know of him, her child, her ail?

I looked for the bright young face of old,
 Time had wrought its changes there;
 As music of chiming bells of gold,
 At passing of day in sunset glow.

There was a glint, a faint little gleam,
 Of her old-time smile, so soft and true,
 That lit her face with a sunny beam,
 And I knew her by her smile.

His ambition and took his place in the Senate.

When McKinley was looking around for a running mate, he saw the name of Frye again came up. McKinley and the man from Maine were old comrades. They also had lived in the same hotel for years, and there was no man in public life for whom McKinley had a greater admiration or in whose he had more confidence. Again the second place on the presidential ticket was given to Frye, and again, after pondering the matter carefully, he decided to decline. The venerable Senator had no other choice.

course. He is of the opinion that he makes a better Senator than he would a President, and that his career needs rounding out in a higher office. After serving in the National Legislature for twenty years, he has enough to do for comfort. He never has possessed much of the public's confidence, but he has his law

Dandergine

GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes:
As a result of using Dandergine, my hair is close to five feet in length.

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful, until the soil in which the plant grows must be amended. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful. Loss of hair is due to the scalp drying out or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your hair will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Dandergine has a most wonderful effect upon the scalp and the hair grows again. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered. It penetrates the scalp and the hair grows again. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered. It penetrates the scalp and the hair grows again.

One 2-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing remedy. It is a beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE To show how quickly Dandergine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the

MANY THOUSANDS HANG ON RESULT

Judge Miller's Far-Reaching Escheat Case Decision.

Points Way To Increase In School Fund.

Higher Court To Pass On Law Involved.

DEFENDANT WINS AND LOSES.

What is regarded as perhaps the most far-reaching decision that has been handed down in the Jefferson Circuit Court for many a day is that delivered yesterday by Judge Shackelford Miller, First Chancery Division, at joint session. The decision, which may go to the United States Supreme Court if it is sustained by the Court of Appeals, will mean hundreds of thousands of dollars to the schools of the State and about $200,000 to the Louisville School Board. The decision is against the German Insurance Company in part and in favor of the company in part.

Under the terms of the decision property with a value of about $500,000 to the School Board, and another piece, with a value of about $18,000 is held to belong properly to the defendant. In finding for the insurance company in the latter instance Judge Miller sustained the plea of "future use" made by the defendant's attorneys. That means that although the corporation has not actually been using the property for five years, it verily expects to do so at some time sooner or later.

MUSICAL EVENTS

Mme. Jeanne Jomelli, the singer who sprang into fame in one night in Louisville, appeared in Louisville again a little less than a year ago, when, notwithstanding a most disagreeable night, she attracted a large and brilliant audience. There is every reason to believe that Mme. Jomelli will be greeted by just as large and brilliant an audience this week as those that attended the performances of Mme. Sembrich and Pepito Arrilla.

Mme. Jomelli hails from that quaint Dutch town of Amsterdam, Holland, and it was there that she first gained fame as a singer. Mesmerized, as has long been called the "Lampert of Holland," will, since the success of Mme. Jomelli, be called upon to change this appellation to that of "Instructor of Jomelli," for, while the honor is only implied in the first, it is an absolute fact in the second instance.

The exactness of Mme. Jomelli's phrasing, the purity of her tone and the absolute ease with which she accomplishes the most difficult feats of vocalization, all reflect great credit upon her early master, and it is a tribute to her real greatness that she does not hesitate to place it there.

Closing Concerts.

With its concert Thursday evening, December 9, at the Seelbach, and Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, December 12, at the Masonic Theater, the Philharmonic closes its season of 1909. The programme selected by Director Karl Schmidt is a fitting climax to a season of brilliant offerings. The opening number, Haydn's "Major Symphony," is a bright, lively composition consisting of a spirited Allegro, a sweet, gentle Andante, and a Minuet more a boisterous country dance than the stately figure of the ballroom and a stirring hunting movement with which it closes.

In the prelude to Saint Saens' "Fenice," the only part of the overture now performed, is a beautiful violin solo which will be played by Charles Letzler.

"The Dance of the Sylphs," the temptation scene from Berlioz' Damnation of Faust, gives a graphic picture of the beauties with which Mephisto sought to draw Faust into his power. The ever popular march from Lenore Symphony, Raff and Liebesonne and Canonetta, from Victor Herbert's Serenade for string orchestra, are always charming to an audience. With the closing number of the overture from Orpheus aux Enfers, Offenbach, a brilliant sparkling composition, the orchestra completes a most successful and satisfactory year.

The numbers to be sung by Mr. Webb, especially the selections from "The Juggler of Notre Dame," Massenet, are of interest to the music-loving people of Louisville. In the story of the Virgin Mary's flight with the infant Jesus from Herod's troops, Massenet has given a beautiful picture of the simple faith of the French peasant. The music varies from the wild harp of the mother at the appearance of the soldiers to the sweet soothing lullaby when Jesus falls asleep in the leaves of the sage bush. Besides this number, Mr. Webb will sing three folk songs in which he will be accompanied by Mrs. Fred and Harig. The programme is as follows:

Major Symphony.....Haydn
Prelude—The Deluge.....Saint-Saens
Violin Obligato.....
Basso solo, from "Juggler of Notre Dame".....Massenet
Dance of the Sylphs.....Berlioz
March from Lenore Symphony.....Raff
(a) Shepherd, See Thy Horse's Flowing Mane.....Korway
(b) The Flowers of the Broom.....
(c) O'uld Dr. Magin.....Lehr
Mr. Webb.
Mrs. Harig, accompanist.
(a) Liebesonne.....Victor Herbert
(b) Canonetta.....Victor Herbert
Overture—Orpheus aux Enfers.....Offenbach

Noted Violinist.

The second concert of the Symphony Orchestra will take place at the Masonic Theater, December 17, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The celebrated young American violinist, Otto Meyer, is the soloist, and as this is the only opportunity the Louisville public will have to hear him, it is certain that a large audience will be present. Mr. Meyer, although young in years, has been creating a great sensation abroad, where he has appeared in the principal cities of Germany, Bohemia, France, England, etc. A student of Cesar Thomson, Jacobson, Sevek and Ysaye, his technical equipment is phenomenal, and even the most critical hearers have given him no praise. He has been compared to Kullbek and other violinists of similar fame. Not only abroad, but in the Eastern cities as well, his playing has aroused enthusiasm everywhere, and his coming to Louisville is anticipated with the greatest interest.

The Symphony Orchestra is rehearsing a new and interesting programme, under the direction of Mr. Cox and it is confidently expected that the next concert will be even more enjoyable than the two recent ones. The Sunday afternoon concert is a wholly original and give more opportunity to judge the ability of the organization. These concerts place the best music within the reach of the general public and should prove highly educational.

Quintet Club Concert.

The Louisville Quintet Club, composed of Mrs. J. E. Whitney, piano; Charles Letzler, first violin; Mrs. Alinde W. Rudolf, second violin; Victor H. Rudolph, third violin; and Carl Goldmark, cello, will give their second concert of this season at the Woman's Club on Tuesday, December 7, at 8:15 p. m. The programme follows:

String Quartet—Opus 18, No. 4.....L. Beethoven
Allegro ma non troppo.
Scherzo andante Scherzo quasi allegretto.
Menuetto allegretto.
Nocturno, Andante from String Quartet No. 2.....A. Borodine
Piano Quintet—Opus 33.....Carl Goldmark
Allegro vivace.
Adagio.
Scherzo, allegretto con spirito.
Allegro vivace.

Music Teachers To Meet.

The Louisville Music Teachers' Association meets next Thursday night in the choir room of Calvary church, and a full attendance is earnestly desired, as important matters are to be discussed. These meetings give teachers the opportunity to unite in promoting musical activity in the city, and it is hoped that its influence will extend throughout the State and result in much benefit to teachers in other cities as well. The subject of piano technique will be resumed at this meeting, the discussion at the last having been found most interesting and beneficial. Among those who took part are Miss Duval, Frederick Cowles, William Conen, Mrs. Frederick Harrig.

Organ Recital.

This evening, at 7:30 o'clock, Carl Shackleton will give a half-hour organ recital at the Warren Memorial Presbyterian church. This recital will be the first of a series of recitals to be given on the first Sunday in each month.

The regular evening service will follow the recital. The programme follows:

Recital At Woman's Club.
Miss Julia Levin, who is the daughter of the Rev. H. Levin, of the Adath Jeshurun congregation, will give a recital at the Woman's Club on the evening of December 20, assisted by Charles Letzler, violinist, and Frederick Cowles, accompanist.

About two years ago, through the influence of Edward de Rosette and Alexander Lambert, Miss Levin secured a scholarship in the New York College of Music, where she studied under Buzzi-Peccini.

After this concert Miss Levin expects to renew her studies in Paris.

Piano Recital.

Mrs. Anna Major-Rapley will give a piano recital at Smith & Nixon's hall on the evening of December 16 at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Major-Rapley is a graduate pupil of Theodore Leschetizky. The programme follows:

The Two Skylarks.....Leschetizky
La Campanella.....Paganini-Liszt
Evening Meditation.....Major-Rapley
Etude.....Mozart
Funeral March.....Chopin Concert Paraphrase.....Wagner-Liszt
(Tannhauser-Overture.)

STAMPS GO WITH RUSH ON FIRST DAY

FIVE THOUSAND STICKERS SOLD AT HEADQUARTERS.

LITTLE BOY OFFERS AID IN THE GOOD WORK.

GIRLS WILL BEGIN THIS WEEK.

The initial sales of Christmas stamps yesterday at the downtown stores were larger than had been expected. The fine weather brought out a large number of holiday shoppers, and few of them passed by without asking for the stamps. As nearly every large store in the retail district is distributing the "stickers," the number disposed of yesterday ran far up into the thousands.

The Christmas stamp committee's headquarters are at the northeast corner of Fourth and Green, opposite the Courier-Journal building, and here many requests were made. The sales there reached close to 5,000 and it is expected that before the campaign is over 20,000 a day will be the average there. The committee believes now that the half million stamps secured for sale in Louisville will be exhausted before Christmas arrives. More will be secured in that event.

The sales through the women's committee, which has secured 250 girls to assist in distributing the Merry Christmas warriors against tuberculosis, will begin next Wednesday. Many of the most prominent points in the city will have stamp booths, and winsome lassies will be in charge of them.

The following places will be stations for the sale of the stamps: The post office, Seelbach's, T. P. Taylor's drug stores, the Todd building, the Atherton building, the Columbia building, the Lincoln building, Benedict's, the public library, the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, the city hall and the courthouse. Others will be added before the first sales made through the women's committee are started, and practically every office building in town will be taken care of.

An instance of the general sympathy that is being felt for the holiday crusade was given yesterday morning when a bright-faced lad of 10 walked into the Christmas stamp headquarters.

"Say, mister," he said to the man in charge, "don't you want someone to tack up your cards for you?"

"Why, yes, that's a good idea," was the smiling reply. "Do you know anyone who does that sort of thing?"

"Why, I can do it," he said eagerly. "That's what I came in for, to see if you couldn't use me."

They told him all right, and gave him a bunch of cards.

"How much are you going to charge us for putting those up?" he was asked just as he started out of the door. He almost dropped the cards in his hands.

"I'm not going to charge you anything," he said. "I just want to help!"

And he's making one of the best helpers around headquarters, too.

POLICEMAN PINCHES GOOD OLD UNCLE ANDY.

Mr. Carnegie Ran Auto Too Fast and Was Taken With Chauffeur To Police Station.

New York, Dec. 4.—Orders were orders, and Andrew Carnegie had to stop to ball his chauffeur to-day, although he had not any money with him and the call of the golf links was pressing. With Judge Reid and another Pittsburgh man Mr. Carnegie was on his way to St. Andrews links when the chauffeur was held up and the chauffeur arrested on a charge of exceeding the speed limit.

"We weren't speeding," said Mr. Carnegie, "and we have an engagement at the golf links. Can't we go on?"

The policeman was no respecter of persons, so the retired iron master had to go to the police station. Mr. Carnegie and Magistrate Herrman had a pleasant little talk, the millionaire being assured that he would not have his day's pleasure spoiled by delay. Mr. Carnegie was very sure his chauffeur was not speeding.

"You know your honor," said Mr. Carnegie, "I'm very careful with my chauffeurs. They have the reputation in Scotland of being the best chauffeurs there. I pay them very good salaries, and in addition a bonus of 10 per cent. of their wages to abstain from liquor."

When the chauffeur was held for trial and it came to a question of bail, Mr. Carnegie said he hadn't any money with him. "I'll lend you some," volunteered the court, "but property will do." Mr. Carnegie offered his mansion at No. 2 East Ninety-first street as security, which Magistrate Herrman thought would be sufficient.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 4.—It was rumored here to-day that the Hon. Luke Wright, of Memphis, has been retained by the Coopers, convicted of murdering Senator Carmack, before the Supreme Court. A Memphis dispatch says Wright has been approached on the subject.

CLASS PINS

Have Arrived For the Lads and Lassies.

NUGGETS OF GOLD FOR PROSPECTIVE GRADUATES.

MUCH SWAPPING OF SCHOOL-DAY JEWELS.

VARIETY IN MANUAL INSIGNIA.

After a few heated debates and spells of wrangling the class pins of the graduating classes of Louisville's High Schools have been selected, and what's better, have actually arrived, to be the pride of the lads and lassies who are so fortunate as to wear them. In all 236 beautiful nuggets of gold, embellished with the colors and the numbers of the classes, have come from the shops of the goldsmiths and are now seen flashing from the lapels and waists of the graduates-to-be—or those who have been privileged to wear them. And right here lies a tale; most of the pins have changed hands and are now in the possession of the "privileged characters."

Smaller Size.

The two senior classes of the Male High School, the class of '09½, which graduates in January and the one of '10, which graduates in June, had rather peaceful sailing in the selection of their pins, as the style to be used for all time was selected several years ago at a meeting of the entire school. It is a seal pin with the letters, L. M. H. S. around the edge and a purple "H" in the center, encircled by the laurel wreath of victory. At the bottom is the number of the class, either '09½ or '10. But the boys did not get their pins without some use of the forensic art; the size did not suit and was ordered smaller than that of the three previous years. The young orators who were urging the adoption of the neater size often declared with the greatest of feeling that the old shape was equal to a policeman's badge. This argument seemed to have great weight and the dainty size was accordingly selected. The seniors who will leave High School at the middle of the session number ten, and they were the first to be presented with the new pins. They were the first to flaunt the insignia of their superiority before the little freshmen and when the ten favored graduates appeared in chapel last Monday morning they were the recipients of the cheers of their admiring schoolmates. The forty-seven boys who will leave books and teachers next June shortly afterward received their pins and were just as loudly applauded and admired by the under classmen.

Tokens Change Hands.

Those who were made the proud possessors of the little golden nuggets, that signify four years of hard work, or diplomacy in getting through, which ever it may be, were about the proudest beings that ever existed. And no amount of coaxing could have persuaded them to part with the treasure during the first few days, but when the girls began to plead that they be allowed to wear the pins and the doughty youths began to flatter the objects of their affections, my! how the pins begin to migrate. Now fifty pins of the two classes have left the lapels of the wearers of the purple and old gold and gone—wherever "she" happens to be. In most cases, however, one of the Girls' High School pins belonging to some sweet girl graduate has come to replace the "he" gave to "her." Gave, of course, so long as a petty quarrel does not upset their love.

Fortunate Lads.

And the boy of Manual or High School who wears one of those pins belonging to a girl of either the class of '09½ or '10 is a fortunate lad, not only because of the feeling that it is the property of Kentucky's beauties, but the pin itself is an artistic triumph. That of the class of the midyear is an oval with L. G. H. S. inscribed about a raised black enamel diamond, bearing the number of the class. The one of the June graduates is a circular seal with the letters L. G. H. S. and the number, '10, worked together in a beautiful monogram. The girls are equally proud of these, but not too proud of them to bestow them on their friends. In this manner about one-third of the 130 pins of the combined graduating classes are no longer seen in the corridors of the Girls' High School.

Pin and Ring.

The Manual boys have not been outdone by the other students in the selection of their class insignia, for they have obtained variety between the two of his class pins, but he also wanted to flaunt one himself, so he got around the matter by purchasing two, and everybody was delighted.

Wins High Honor.

Miss Rhea Schimpeler, a graduate of the Louisville Girls' High School, and now a student of Wellesley College, recently was awarded a very high honor for her class work at that institution. Her academic work as a freshman and her work for this year were most favorably referred to in the chapel by the faculty of Wellesley.

maximum in recitation. The girls say that they have ceased to dread old Caesar, with his monotonous details of fights, and Cicero's long-winded eulogies of himself, and declare that they will be soon writing their love missives in the language of the Romans.

Like Home.

A noted visitor to the Girls' High School recently expressed great wonder at the excellent discipline that seemed to prevail, and she asked many of her friends for the reason. Whether or not she ever received a satisfactory answer will probably never be known, but if she had asked Prof. Bartholomew, the principal, he might have told her. This is what he says: "The discipline is that of a well-regulated home. The activities of the students are not ruthlessly checked, but gently and firmly directed. The spirit of the school is that of loyalty to the school, and in consequence of this, harmony and good-fellowship are highly prized."

The Girls' High School orchestra, consisting of twenty girls, is rapidly growing in efficiency. Their work at the chapel and general exercises of the school is the source of much enjoyment to the students and friends of the institution.

Conquer Latin.

Junior "C" class in Latin prose composition did record-breaking work for the month of November. Each girl reached a grade of "B," which is the

The Alleghen Literary Society of the Louisville Girls' High School is in a more flourishing condition this year than at any previous time. It has more members, and members who are talented in writing and reading than ever before in the history of the society. The weekly meetings have always been well attended and on several occasions when a special feature was announced the auditorium has been crowded to overflowing.

The object of the society is to create literary elegance in writing and fluency and grace in conversation, as well as art in public reading. In this the society has been remarkably successful. A girl who is a member of the Alleghen Society is indeed a favored miss, for she belongs to an organization that has before it a roster of many members who have now become famous in the world of letters. Such women as Miss Abie Gordon, Mrs. John G. Roach, Miss Anna J. Hamilton, Mrs. Sarah Nabb Maury and scores of others are included among this number. Mrs. Sarah Nabb Maury, a former member of the Alleghen Society and a teacher in the Girls' High School, has just issued three Christmas books: "The Holly," "The Beach" and "The Ginkgo Tree." The books are beautifully bound and illustrated. Mrs. Maury's position as chairman of the forestry committee of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs eminently fits her for this work.

The society will give an open meeting some time this year to which the public will be invited and a notable programme is promised and assured.

CHINA PREPARING HERSELF FOR NEW ORDER OF THINGS

By FRANK G. CARPENTER.

PEKIN, Nov. 7.—Wonder of wonders! The despotic empire of China is to become a constitutional monarchy. It is to have a national parliament and provincial assemblies—the people are to make their own laws and to learn to govern themselves. The edicts to this effect were sent forth more than a year ago by the great Empress Dowager. Before that Yuan Shih Kai was brought to Peking to aid in the movement, and Tuan Fang and other eminent Chinese officials were sent to Europe to study modern methods of government and to prepare an up-to-date scheme for China. In August, 1908, upon the basis of their report, an edict was published outlining the plan by which China might have a new constitution and a national parliament eight years from now.

Since then the Chinese have been studying parliamentary law and preparing themselves for self-government. They have organized debating societies in every part of the empire, and they are now discussing the chief features of Western civilization. Many of the Governors have established schools for this purpose and are educating their subjects along constitutional lines. The Viceroy of Nanking, who rules about 100,000,000 on the lower Yangtze Kiang, has appointed lecturers, who are giving nightly talks on modern constitutional government, and many of the chief of his dominion have assemblies where the people come together every week to discuss what they shall do when allowed to vote.

The same movement is going on here in North China. Tientsin has its constitutional debating societies. It has organized municipal councils and the city fathers are attending night schools. The same is true of Hankow and other places farther west, as well as of Canton and the other big centers of the South. Indeed, this whole nation is in the throes of an intellectual and political revolution; and that mighty body politic, which we know as the celestial kingdom is rejuvenating its soul.

How China Woke Up.

But let me tell you about the constitutional movement. There is nothing like it in history. The rulers of one-fourth of the world suddenly resolved to give up their power and allow their subjects to govern themselves. They lay out the scheme in cold blood and inaugurate it without a revolution. It is not a spasmodic effort, but a progressive movement which will take almost a decade. It is to be started at once in every part of the empire, and is so systematically planned that it will fit these 400 million-eyed millions to make their own laws and to practically control their own government.

The story of the movement is interesting. It began during the war with Japan, when the giant of modern progress, in the person of the Mikado, drew back his mailed fist and swatted the sleeping nation in the eye. It grew as the European Powers stole piece after piece of Chinese property along the seacoast, and it was already strong when the Boxers rose in rebellion, and the armies of the West caused the flight of the Empress Dowager from Peking. The humiliation of China in being forced to kowtow to Germany for the killing of Baron Kettner was a strong push toward its modernization. The victory of the Japanese over the Russians was another, and now the common people, the gentry and the officials are awake to the need of a change. The yellow giants are sleeping no longer. She has pulled her dry bones together and has sprung from her couch with her almond eyes open. She is thoroughly aroused, and, with her great soul—for great the soul of China really is—she is casting about to find "where she is at," and how she shall take her mighty part in the work of the world.

THE KIND OF MEN WHO ARE RUNNING CHINA.

Officials are awake to the need of a change. The yellow giants are sleeping no longer. She has pulled her dry bones together and has sprung from her couch with her almond eyes open. She is thoroughly aroused, and, with her great soul—for great the soul of China really is—she is casting about to find "where she is at," and how she shall take her mighty part in the work of the world.

Work of Many Minds.

The plan for the reorganization of China was discussed in connection with Li Hsiang Chang before his death. It was finally laid out by the great Dowager, assisted by Yuan Shih Kai, Chang Chi Tung and other leading officials. Wu Tingfang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, had to do with it, and nearly every Governor and Viceroy sent in suggestions and advice in the form of memorials. The plan brought back by Tuan Fang and his associates from Europe were thoroughly studied, and a scheme of local, provincial and national government was laid out. This was first put forth in the edicts of the Empress Dowager in August, 1908, and the people at once began to put them into action. The work was proceeding in every province at the time of the death of the great Dowager and Emperor last November, and one of the first proclamations of the new administration was that these constitutional reforms should be still carried on. The Prince Regent has announced himself in favor of them and is most active in their support.

The programme now in force extends over nine years. The first year is for the preparation of the people for the provincial assemblies by the Viceroys and Governors, including the opening of schools for the studying of self-government in the cities, market towns and villages.

During the second year members are to be elected to the provincial assemblies, and in the third they are to be organized and in working order. By the fourth year there will be a new code of laws and new courts, and in the fifth a new system of taxation will be enforced.

The sixth year continues the preparation of the people for the national parliament, and during the seventh the reorganization of the Government revenues and expenditures will be taken up.

The year following the officials will begin to consider the imperial household expenses; they will establish a judicial bureau and will begin to issue ordinances.

In the ninth year the imperial constitution will be finally enforced and the imperial parliament will be in session here at Peking.

This is the bare outline of but a few of the principal provisions. The scheme is elaborate, and it provides for a thorough reorganization along modern lines. There is one great branch devoted to the reforming of the courts, and this includes the establishment of law schools in every great city and at all the provincial capitals.

CRIMINALS ARE NOT ALLOWED TO VOTE.

Another branch is devoted to the creating of a modern army, the steps of growth going on from year to year, and a third deals with education and the gradual organization of a system of schools which will make it compulsory. It is the same with the changes being made in revenues and taxation. Everything is gradual, and in the end China will be as far advanced as Japan today and will have all the modern advantages of other nations.

Take, for instance, the plan laid out for the new school system. The year 1908 was largely devoted to the composition of easy text books along modern lines. This year the text books are being published, and the laws have gone forth that they must be used in all schools. At the same time modern schools are being started in the large cities. Next year the same programme is to be pushed, and by 1912 it is expected there will be a public school in every village and market town. To-day the proportion of Chinese who can read and write is exceedingly low. The nation is not an educated one, as many suppose, and I doubt whether ten men in 1,000 can read and write. By 1913, those who have investigated the matter say, in every 100 should be able to read, and during the following year, if the school scheme is carried out, one in every fifty should be able to both read and write, while at the close of the nine years, when the first members of Parliament are elected, the proportion of literacy should be about one to twenty.

SOME MILLIONAIRES WHO ARE ACTIVE CHURCH WORKERS

By HOLLAND.

JUST because, every Monday morning, when you pick up your favorite newspaper, you are likely to run across a special dispatch containing the essence of the latest words of wisdom that Mr. John D. Rockefeller gave away without price the day before to his Bible class in Cleveland, you shouldn't cultivate the impression that Mr. Rockefeller is the only well-known American "multi" who takes a deep and active interest in religious work.

He's so far from being the only man of great wealth who is an active religious worker that, strange as it may seem (when taken in connection with Mr. Rockefeller's well-known business habits), he hasn't even one of the world's largest Bible school classes for men—that's to be found in Franklin, Pa.—nor yet the more famous—that's to be found in Philadelphia. And each of these Bible classes is instructed every Sunday by a man who counts his wealth in millions of dollars.

In fact, when it comes down to cases, the Keystone State seems to have a larger proportionate number of well-known millionaires actively engaged in Sunday-school and other forms of religious work than any of the other States, not even excepting New York, whose largest village is popularly supposed to contain so many millionaires within its boundaries that it is almost impossible to keep them out of the most restricted circles, even, and have anything at all recognizable left of the circles.

But as for Pennsylvania, whose steel and coal industries don't make more than a score or so of millionaires every profane day in the year—the mills and mines closing down on Sundays, of course—there's Gen. Charles Miller, founder and head of that State's largest men's Bible class; and there's John Wanamaker, founder and head of that State's largest men's Bible class; and there's John H. Converse, the great locomotive manufacturer, who is head of the Presbyterian Church's evangelistic work; and there's A. J. Drexel-Biddle, the very self-same "Tony" Drexel-Biddle, who ever and anon puts on the gloves and "mixes it" with the professionals of the squared ring, thereby causing his name to be listed on the sporting page almost as often as it appears in the column that the Philadelphia newspapers devote to chronicling the doings of Rittenhouse Square society—which means the society of the Quaker metropolis.

"Tony" Biddle's Bible Class.

In the very heart of this District of Columbia, the Holy Trinity church, Sunday morning, about 9 o'clock, there enters the doors of this most fashionable of all Philadelphia's places of worship a tall, well-built young man, with keen eyes, a ready smile, the springing step and the clear skin bespeaking the athlete in good training. He swings in his right hand a plain silver-headed walking stick and under his arm is a black-bound Bible. He enters the Sabbath-school room, greets all comers and, promptly at 9:30 he is teaching his Bible class of thirty-five members.

This is Anthony J. Drexel-Biddle, millionaire son of Philadelphia's bluest blooded family, traveler, athlete, boxer, musician, quiet philanthropist and all-around "good fellow," who has suffered somewhat in his general reputation by being known to the public almost entirely through his pugilistic feats—as the millionaire who has boxed with Jack Johnson, Jack O'Brien, Stanley Ketchel and Al. Kaufman, to mention only a few of the best of them.

But to his class of thirty-five Bible students he is known as an earnest worker for the good of his fellow man. His code is the code of strenuous modern Christianity that learns to give and take hard knocks physically as well as morally, and that uses youth's natural love of muscular exertion as a means of grace.

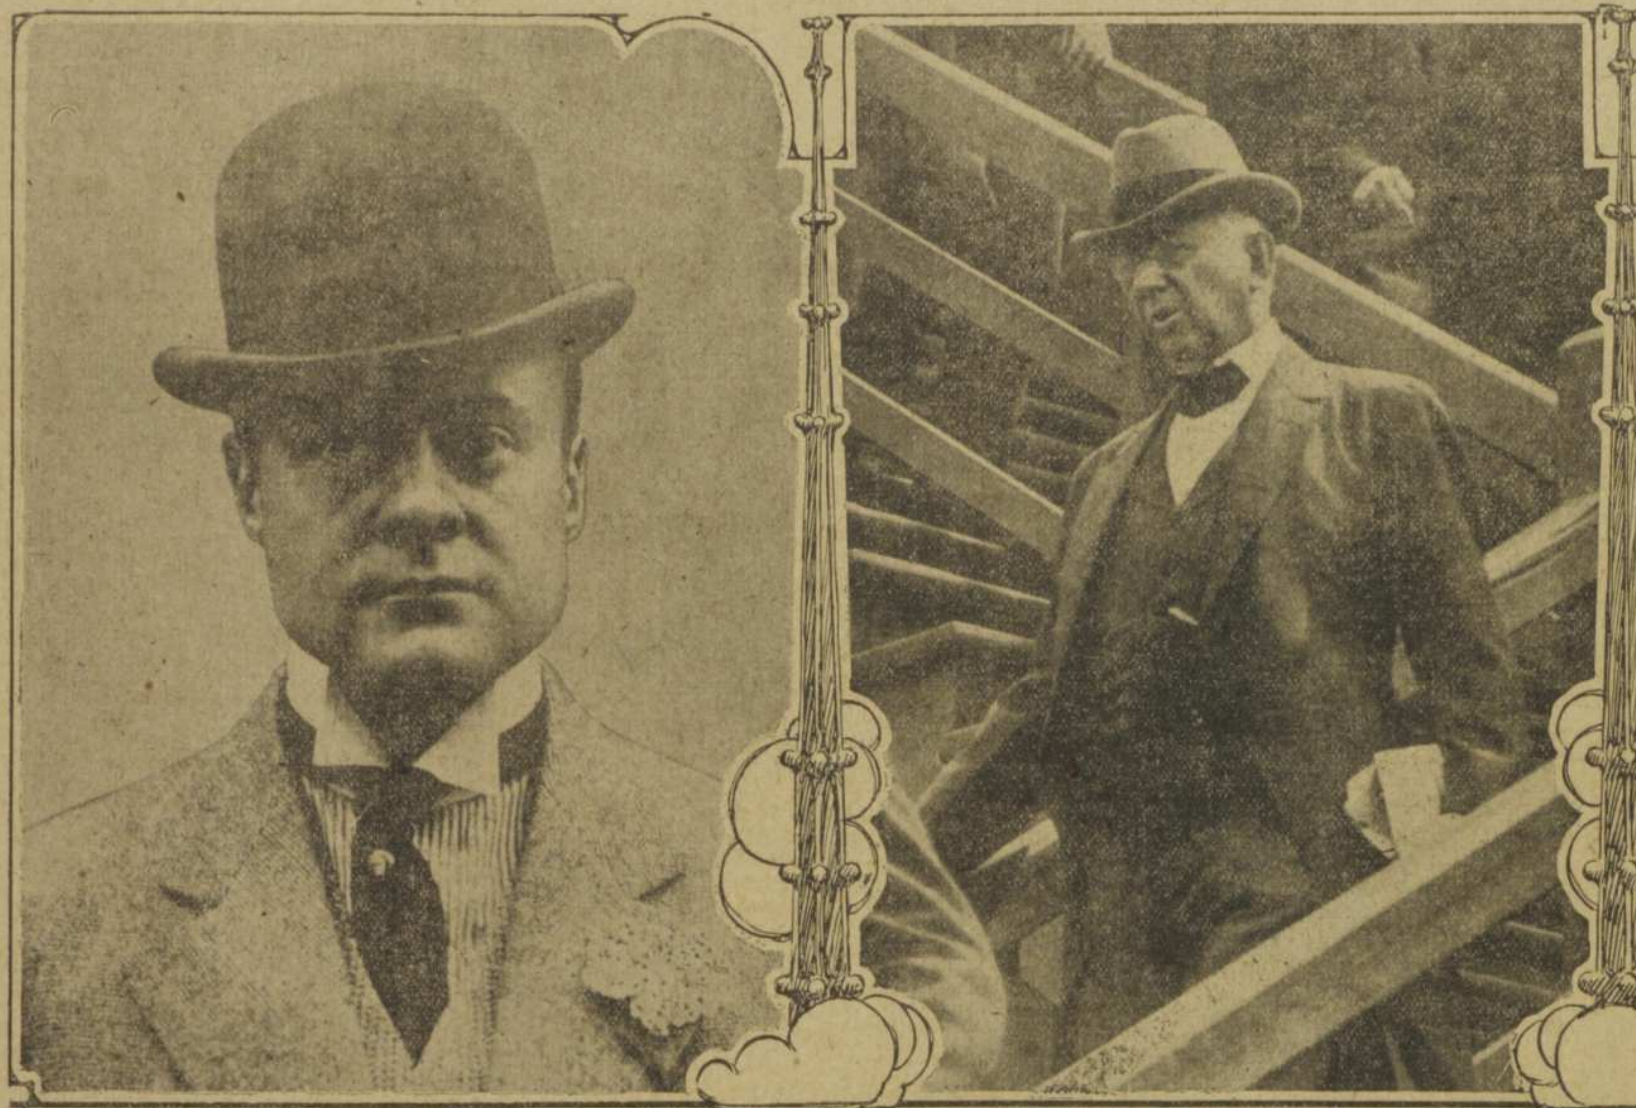

Three years ago "Tony" Biddle started his Bible class with two members. To-day it is still growing, and the members range in age from the youth of 14 to the three oldest members whose ages are respectively 57, 60 and 65. Three of them are Syrians in the rug business and over half are young men just starting their business careers as embryo doctors, lawyers, clerks and salesmen. Their class meets twice a week, on Monday and Thursday, and then attends the regular church service. But this is not his only work with his pupils. Their activities have grown so much that they spend most of the week together and they are planning to do yet more in the near future.

Gymnasium Work, Too.

All this came about through Mr. Biddle's love of gymnastic work. He started among the members of the Bible class the Holy Trinity Brotherhood Gymnasium Association, and a gymnasium was fitted up in the parish house. Here he and the class meet two nights a week, giving Monday evening to the instruction of the negroes of the neighborhood and Thursday to the white people. So beneficial did this work prove not only physically but morally that Mr. Biddle was asked if he could not start a similar movement in the church of St. John the Evangelist. Mr. Biddle consulted with his class and they determined to try. St. John's is the largest Protestant Episcopal parish in Philadelphia, but it is away down in the southern section at Third and Reed streets, and its Sunday-school had almost run to seed for lack of competent teachers and popular interest.

Mr. Biddle and his Bible class soon changed all this. On October 4 of this year they took charge. In a little over a month they had doubled the attendance. They opened a men's club with sixteen members and four weeks later they had thirty-three, all promising to bring more. A little later they opened a branch of the Holy Trinity Brotherhood Gymnasium Association there, and in a few weeks it, too, was a flourishing success.

In his downtown work Mr. Biddle is assisted by his entire Bible class. He himself was chosen superintendent of St. John's Sunday-school, and he spends every Sabbath afternoon there, being continuously at desk in the church from 2:30 until 6 o'clock. On Friday evenings he has the men's club and gymnasium class, and it begins to look as though he would have to set aside another evening in the week in addition to cope with the growing work of the revitalizing congregation.

One result of this work at St. John's is that two other churches in other sections of the city have sent Mr. Biddle urgent appeals for help, and he proposes to turn in and work for them until he has them started on the road to prosperity. He is now arranging with his class to systematize the work so that he can assign certain competent members to each branch while he goes from one to the other, visiting two or three in an evening, teaching a Bible class here, boxing with a young athlete at another, and attending to club meetings at another.

To-day he devotes four evenings a week and all day Sunday to the work. Yet he finds time to do regular gymnastic exercises in his private gymnasium, to box frequently with Jack O'Brien, his favorite pugilist, to study singing and give concerts in which he is down for several numbers, to attend to the social duties necessary for a man of his position, and to lend a helping hand to almost anyone who is in hard luck through no fault or wrongdoing.

But he is most ambitious for the success of his plans he is now maturing to make his strenuous idea of pugnacious Christianity spread until it is represented by a colony in every section of the city.

Mr. Wanamaker's Work.

Before Mr. Biddle entered the work, Philadelphia's only wealthy Bible class leader was John Wanamaker, who fifty-two years ago formed what has long been the world's most famous organization of the sort—the Bethany Sunday-school Bible class, but one of its creators' numerous church activities.

In reality, Mr. Wanamaker's Sunday school begins on Saturday night, when he presides over the meeting of the Bethany Sunday-school teachers. At 6 o'clock the next morning there is a meeting of the "Inner Circle," the leaders of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip. Mr. Wanamaker presides. From 9:30, for an hour, the entire brotherhood meets, six or seven hundred strong, and Mr. Wanamaker is again in the chair. After that he goes to the regular church service, snatches a bite of lunch and is ready for the work of the afternoon.

For many years during the summer months, when his family occupied their suburban home in Jonestown, the millionaire appeared at Bethany each Sabbath morning, a workingman's dinner pail slung over his arm, and he sat in the church rooms and ate his snack at the noon hour. But, in recent years, his health has not allowed this camping with his stomach and his physicians have ordered that he give a little more time to this midday meal. At 2 o'clock the work again begins. The Bethany Sunday-school is divided on the old Biblical plan, a tithe man over each ten men, and leaders over each ten of these. At 2 o'clock, the tithe men meet, with Mr. Wanamaker presiding. Their business keeps them for half an hour and promptly at 2:30 Mr. Wanamaker begins the open exercises of the Sunday-school, lasting half an hour. In this half hour, none can enter or leave the room. Each door is shut off by a rope and each rope is tended by a guard. The rule is strict. The discipline is military. As a result, no one is a few minutes late, as in every Sunday-school. Everybody is a little ahead of time so as not to be shut out.

Students of All Ages.

At 3 o'clock the work of the world-famous Bethany Sunday-school begins, with Mr. Wanamaker in the presiding officer's chair. For an hour there is the steady hum of studious voices, voices both old and young, for there are white-haired students of 80 and more who have been students almost since the school began fifty-two years ago.

At 4 o'clock Sunday-school is over. The teachers and visitors wait and gather in the front seat. Mr. Wanamaker is ready for his weekly "twenty-minute talk" with them. The talks often stretch into an hour and sometimes more, but they are always known as the "twenty-minute talks." This ends Mr. Wanamaker's toil for the day if he is living in his suburban home. If, however, he is occupying his town house the evening finds him again at the church to attend the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society.

During the four years that he was Postmaster General, Mr. Wanamaker traveled from Washington to Philadelphia every Saturday night in time for the teachers' meetings, did his Sunday work, and was at his departmental desk on Monday morning. To-day, when he practically lives in New York, he makes similar weekly trips for the same purpose.

If at any time you would like to locate the third rich Philadelphia who is actively interested in religious work you would do well to seek out, in an out-of-the-way corner on the seventh floor of the Witherspoon building, the door bearing the following legend:

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISTIC WORK.

John H. Converse, chairman.

Wilbur E. Chapman, cor. secy.

Parley E. Zartmann, treas.

It is a most unimpressive office that you will enter. Not much larger than the kind of room that would be engaged by a man of modest means starting a small business of his own.

It has been partitioned so that one part of it has just about space enough for one desk, two chairs and a table, shut off for privacy from the rest. Yet from this desk go out the plans which are guiding the great world's evangelistic movement of the Presbyterian Church, a movement which has spread with such envying effect over the churches of America, England, the Continent of Europe, and it is rapidly becoming the greatest power in Presbyterianism.

At the little desk, on three afternoons a week, you will find an earnest, keen man, white-haired and with white mustache, the strong mouth and jaw bear out the incisive energy of the deep eyes, the whole attitude and atmosphere of the worker suggesting infinite sincerity and untiring devotion to the duties before him.

Before him will be a mass of correspondence from all parts of the world—letters dealing with a multiplicity of details which would tax the brain and body of any ordinary man even if he had no other work in life to occupy his time. But this man attends to it all, refusing to turn over to assistants what he thinks he can take care of better himself, taking up each matter as it comes to hand and disposing of it with a thoroughness whose rapidity is almost startling.

Business Methods.

He is, as he looks, a business man, bringing business methods to bear upon the work of the church. He is doing for the Presbyterian Church just what he did when, in 1873, he took virtual charge of the Baldwin Locomotive Works and sent their output and their profits soaring into such staggering figures that they are the wonder of the industrial world to-day.

The man is John H. Converse, multi-millionaire, philanthropist, Christian business man and the most prominent member of his denomination.

In his office at the locomotive works, half a mile or more to the north on Broad street, he is a hard man to get to unless your business makes it absolutely imperative that he give it his personal attention. He deals with the big things of the business now, but when he first took charge he dealt with the little things as well, handling the minor details until they were in such shape that he could safely turn them over to subordinates. That is what he is doing now in his church work; he is systematizing it and getting it into smooth running.

So that, if you want to see John H. Converse about something not so important, this is the place to do it, here where he is deep in masses of correspondence and where he is open to any suggestion that may result in the spreading of the evangelistic movement. This interest in the revival movement of his church is not a new hobby of the millionaire. He has been its guiding spirit for eight years of hard work.

In 1901 his attention was called to the fact that the churches generally were not in as vigorous spiritual condition as might be expected. When the Presbyterian General Assembly met in Philadelphia in May of that year, he called this matter to its attention and it appointed an evangelistic committee, with Mr. Converse as chairman. The services of the Rev. Wilbur E. Chapman were secured as corresponding secretary, and an evangelistic effort was begun which, from the very first, produced the most satisfactory results.

In 1904 the General Assembly authorized the evangelistic committee to enter into relations with other denominations, and as a result revivals were held in all the cities in the country. In the making of all these plans John H. Converse was the guiding spirit and upon his shoulders fell the most onerous work. But he felt that the movement was good and that it should be widened in its scope, and so, largely at his initiative, the General Assembly of 1908 authorized his committee to arrange for a world-wide evangelistic effort. The first result of this was the Australian visit of Chapman and Alexander, the latter famous for his work with Turkey. In the Antipodes they carried on one of the most extraordinary revivals ever held anywhere.

Mr. Converse has recently completed plans which involve evangelistic effort throughout Europe in co-operation with the Protestant churches both of Great Britain and the Continent. In all of this the millionaire gives freely not only of his great fortune but of his tireless energy and business genius as well.

But Mr. Converse's interest in his church is not confined to its evangelistic movement. He is chairman of the business committee of the board of Education and Sabbath-school work, and is a member of the executive commission of the World's Presbyterian Alliance and president of the board of trustees of the General Assembly. In 1900 he was Vice Moderator of the General Assembly.

Son of a Minister.

Mr. Converse is the son of a Congregational minister, who was as poor as to be unable to give his children adequate education, and he started work at an early age so that the father could devote his meager funds to the education of his four daughters. At the age of 16 he began hanging around a telegraph office where a friend of his was operator, and in a remarkably short time he had mastered the art of the dots and dashes. Then he secured a position as operator and, in this way, earned the money with which he paid for a course in the University of Vermont. During the long vacations he also taught school.

Three days after his graduation from the University Mr. Converse became a member of the editorial force of the Burlington (Vt.) Times, where he remained three years. He had picked up shorthand in the meantime and, in 1864, he was able to accept the position of chief clerk of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. Two years later he was promoted to be chief clerk to the general superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad with his headquarters in Altoona. Four years later, when he was 30 years old, he went to Philadelphia to enter the office force of the Baldwin Locomotive Works and when this firm reorganized in 1873, he became a partner and assumed the active management.

The Largest Bible Class.

Like Mr. Converse, the leader of Pennsylvania's largest men's Bible class, Gen. Charles Miller, of Franklin, Pa., had to earn his own millions, and he started in doing it on a wage of just $3 a week. Of the sort of oil that he puts on the market he has practically a monopoly, and it is out of this product that he has garnered his great wealth, much of which he has employed to beautify his home town, which, after his family and his Bible class, is the thing closest to his heart.

Gen. Miller—who, by the way, got his title as a member of the National Guard—organized his class thirty-seven years ago with five of the best of the all Franklin as the foundation. To-day its membership is close to seven hundred. By birth its founder was an Irishman, but he has brought to this country when he came.

In Cyrus H. McCormick Chicago has a very wealthy young man, who, by the way, inherited his money. But unlike Mr. Rockefeller or Mr. Miller, he is not an instructor in religious teachings. He is a member of the Y. M. C. A. and, as a young man's club, but when it comes to giving his moral or financial support, Mr. McCormick is never far from being actively in religious affairs tending more toward the administrative side of that work.

In connection with his work in behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association that Mr. McCormick joined the Y. M. C. A. in 1879. He was the Chicago Y. M. C. A. was a mere struggling mission. It was at this time that Mr. McCormick met Mr. R. L. D. and, in 1880, he and two of his wealthy college friends were graduated from college and returned to Chicago. They met and decided to assist in the Y. M. C. A. and agreed to stand by it to the end. That this compact was fully carried out is exemplified in the fact that Mr. McCormick is the finest Y. M. C. A. in the United States. Mr. McCormick and his immediate family have contributed to the Y. M. C. A. about $300,000, and he has been the means of gathering for it among his friends and others more than $500,000.

Religious Work of Mr. Morgan.

Of New York's rich men who take an active interest in religious work, unquestionably among the most prominent is none other than J. Pierpont Morgan. In short time ago he was in regular attendance at the diocesan convention of the Episcopal church, held in New York City, and continually took part in the matters up for discussion. He also regularly attends the national gatherings of the church, where his voice is an influential one. The Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainey, who was able to make St. George's church in New York City, nationally famous because of his unlimited financial backing he received from Mr. Morgan, and it's a truly impressive sight to see Mr. Morgan pass the plate at St. George's of a Sunday morning.

August Belmont is another rich layman of the Episcopal church in New York City. One evidence of this is the Belmont chapel of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. But Mr. Belmont's greatest interest is in the Y. M. C. A. which he displayed in connection with the little Episcopal church in Hempstead, where he has his Long Island home. Not long ago this church, through his efforts, cleared off a debt of $4,000. And, of course, there is John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose entire interest in religious matters rivals his father's.

Texas Couple Gives Barbecue to Former Slaves.

MR. AND MRS. J.C. MAXWELL.

GUESTS AT THE BARBECUE.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.) SPRINKLE, Tex., Dec. 1.—J. C. Maxwell gave a barbecue to about sixty of his former slaves and their descendants the other day. The great feast took place in a beautiful grove of live oak trees upon Mr. Maxwell's farm. It was an outdoor event that was highly enjoyed by the guests, and they were the invited guests, and by Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, who were on hand to see that nothing was omitted that would add to the pleasure of the occasion.

When Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell came to Texas from Virginia fifty-one years ago they brought with them twenty-five negro slaves. They located upon a large farm six miles from Austin, near where the town of Sprinkle is now situated. When the war came on Mr. Maxwell was one of the first to go from this section. He left his slaves in charge of his plantation and to look after the affairs of his home during his absence. At the close of the war, Mr. Maxwell found himself in bad financial condition. He owed a large sum of money upon his plantation and on top of this his slaves were free. The faithful old servants grieved very much when they learned that they were to stay no longer with the Maxwell family. In response to their pleadings, Mr. Maxwell agreed to keep all of his slaves until they could arrange to get a start in the world for themselves. They remained with him for several months until they could find new locations. All of them wanted to be near Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, and they rented land all around the plantation, establishing one of the most remarkable negro communities in the South.

The former slaves prospered to a wonderful degree. Mr. Maxwell helped each of them to get a start. He provided them with food and clothing during the hard years when they had failed with their crops. He made it a part of his daily duty to look after the welfare of the men, women and children of the community. They came to him whenever in need of advice, whether in regard to their farms or on some question of a more confidential nature. So well did these negroes get along that they were able to purchase the farms which they originally rented. Some of them are worth from $15,000 to $25,000. They have raised families of children who have been given the advantages of education.

Of the twenty-five slaves whom Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell brought to Texas with them from Virginia, seven are still alive and make their home in the Sprinkle community. The descendants of the original twenty-five slaves now number 148 men, women and children. At the time Oklahoma was opened for settlement a number of the younger families moved there and located upon lands which have increased very much in value since then. Although some of the negroes are scattered they never forgot Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell. They often write to them for advice, and whenever they visit the old community they call upon their benefactors.

It has been the aim of Mr. Maxwell to teach the negroes how they should conduct their farms and other business affairs. He has inculcated thrift in all of them. Unlike most negroes, the younger set of the Sprinkle community are not shiftless; they have been taught to work and save their money. Although they have received the advantage of a common school education it has not caused them to want to be as common preachers, teachers or lawyers, as is usually the case. Most of them are living upon farms, where they are industrious and contented.

The seven original slaves who still live in the Sprinkle community and who attended the recent barbecue range in age from 75 to 85 years. Aunt Fannie Tucker and Uncle Mose Fraction were the oldest ones present, and they showed that they felt the importance of the occasion. Aunt Fannie has been at the "head" of the family for many years, and she rules over the younger folks with a rigorous hand. Even Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell are given her most solicitous care. She greatly feared that her former "massa and missus" would overdo themselves at the barbecue. In a further of excitement she busied herself looking after their wants and comforts.

"Now, Massa, ef yo' don't quit eatin' so much o' dis yere hog meat you gwine ter be tuck down wid misery to-night," she cautioned Mr. Maxwell, who was enjoying the roast pig with which the long table was loaded down.

"I jus' declar' dese yere chilluns don't got no sense 'tall yere dey gets hawt somethin' good's ter eat," she asserted as she watched the black horde sweep down upon the banquet table.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell had as their guests several white friends. Young beef and several pigs were roasted a delicious turn in the barbecue trenches under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell. The table was made of boards and was located under the branches of live oak trees. The negroes with their smiling, shiny faces were in an ecstasy of delight as they watched the preparations for the barbecue and helped with the work.

When everything was ready for the banquet to begin Mr. Maxwell gave the signal and the long benches which surrounded the table were soon filled with the eager throng.

"This is one time when you white folks will have to wait for second table," Mr. Maxwell told his guests.

The negroes were waited on by Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, who piled up their plates with the many good things that had been prepared for the occasion. Perfect decorum was observed. The guests felt the importance of the occasion. Not for the world would one have committed an act of rudeness that would show that they had not been properly "brought up" by old

"massa and missus." At the same time there was no solemnity about the event. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell and their white guests who sat down at "second table" were showered with attentions at the hands of devoted negroes. Aunt Fannie finally came to the rescue.

"You alls am a-casten 'tired too much," she said.

The white folks took the hint and the banquet came to a close.

When the remains of the feast had been cleared away the negroes were free to enjoy themselves as they chose. They spent the afternoon at amusements of different kinds. Gathered around Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, many reminiscences of ante-bellum days were exchanged.

"I don't know when I have enjoyed a day more," Mr. Maxwell said that evening when the negroes had departed for their respective homes. Their songs floated back to him and mingled with the rumbling of their giggles and wagons. "I wanted to see the old slaves and their families together once more and give them a day of genuine enjoyment. I am glad I have given them such a good time. They are good negroes—the best in the country."

The Last Indian Battle In This Section.

Itinerary when he came to Kentucky in 1790 down the Ohio River, in which Mr. Brown gives the location of every island between Pittsburgh and the mouth of the Ohio (Maysville at the mouth of the Limestone), and tells on which side of each island the channel was.

William Brown remained for a time in Kentucky after his arrival in 1792, and then returned to Virginia to secure land for himself and his brother Patrick, and he had patented to himself in 1794 a large tract of land on the west fork of Nolich about three miles north of where the present town of Hodgenville stands, which he divided with his brother Patrick, and located on the other half himself, and under an oak selected himself on that tract of land and his remains were buried in 1825.

It will be observed that the manuscript speaks of Brown's Run as the one on which the battle was fought, but this is not true, as Brown's Run is three miles north of Indian Run and empties into Salt River, while the manuscript says the stream on which the battle took place empties into Rolling Fork, and as Indian Run is the only stream in that vicinity of any size which empties into Rolling Fork it is bound to be the one on which the fight took place; besides, the exact location of the battle has been pointed out by J. R. Brown, and it is there, and it has been in the legendary history of that locality, and father has shown the place to son from one generation to another, so that the situs is fixed with unassailable certainty.

Another near "Blue" spring twelve or fourteen redmen are buried, but so far as I can learn no one has ever pointed out the exact spot, but they were given burial by Col. Brown and his men. The battlefield is overgrown with shrubs and briars, and forest trees are scattered here and there, but there is not much save the tall bluff and little spring and the solitude of the gloomy ravine to indicate that it was the scene of a sanguinary conflict between aboriginals and Anglo-Saxons before the birth of our nation's Commonwealth. J. R. ZIMMERMAN.

BRING FORWARD
HEAVIEST GUNSVigorously Political Battle
In England Is Fought.Great Radical Demonstration In London.Suffragettes Attempt To Break Up Meetings.

HAVE BUT LITTLE SUCCESS.

London, Dec. 4.—The whole of Great Britain is immersed in the political campaign which has been inaugurated as a result of the refusal of the House of Lords to consent to the budget.

The country is divided into two great camps, composed of those who support the lords' action and those who contend that the House of Commons must have absolute control of the finances of the nation. There are, of course, other issues, such as tariff reform vs. free trade, but these are being pushed into the background by the conflict between the two houses.

While the various local organizations are busy selecting candidates and preparing for the contests in their respective districts the leaders of the great parties are carrying on a general campaign.

Radical Demonstration.

The radicals, who had long foreseen the fate of their financial bill, are not allowing the grass to grow under their feet. In London this afternoon one of their organizations, the National Democratic League, held a demonstration as a protest against the action of the lords, which was one of the most notable that has ever been held in the metropolis.

Fully 20,000 persons, mostly of the laboring and partisan classes, gathered in Trafalgar Square and cheered the radical speakers who condemned in unmeasured terms the members of the upper chamber.

Suffragettes Break Out.

The only divergent note here, as elsewhere, came from the suffragettes, who, after a term of comparative quiet, again started to indulge in attempts to break up the radical meetings. The Trafalgar Square crowd, however, was too great for their efforts to have any effect.

They were more successful at Southport, where, by climbing to a roof and shouting through the skylight, they succeeded in interrupting Winston Spencer Churchill's meeting, and at Leith, where, aided by roughs, they effected a diversion by attempting to storm a meeting which Sir Edward Gray, the foreign secretary, was addressing.

Churchill Attacks Unionists.

Mr. Churchill was able to conclude his speech and, undisturbed by this experience, held a meeting at Liverpool this evening in which he expounded his cashmere campaign. He ridiculed the idea that the old age pensions and the navy should be paid for by raising the tariff reform, and referred to Mr. Balfour's offer to assist cotton growing in the empire as very odd in view of the fact that the Unionists, when in power, although asked to do something in this direction, took no action.

The National Union of Free Traders has issued a manifesto calling attention to the action of the House of Lords which, it declares, "makes the support of the candidates who are favorable to the emancipation of free education from sectarian control."

The Unionists are nominating a candidate in every constituency in England and Scotland, and with the exception of the seats held by the speaker, the Right Hon. James W. Hamilton, and Joseph Chamberlain, who represents Birmingham, West, either the Liberals or the Laborites will nominate a man to oppose them. The Liberals have decided not to contest Mr. Chamberlain's seat on account of his illness.

Churchill's Speech.

In the course of his speech Mr. Churchill said:

"We are face to face with a period when parties necessarily are grouped on violent lines, when brute force and class hatred, instead of forbearance and public spirit, are becoming the characteristics of British politics."

Lewis Harcourt compared the present issues with those of the time of Cromwell and the French revolution.

Sir Edward Grey, in his address at Leith, said that he was glad that the House of Lords was barred from retreat and that there would be no opportunity for repentance.

The Liberal peer, Lord Lyveden, described the lords as rebels against the crown.

These speeches by men like the foreign secretary, who has hitherto been regarded as representing the staidest whiggism and Lewis Harcourt, whose immaculate attire has earned for him the reputation of "dandy of the House of Commons," indicate the nature of the political fight which has now begun, and is reflected in the speeches of the demonstrators at Trafalgar Square as published in the Sunday papers.

Socialistic Utterances.

The Trafalgar Square speeches were quite open to the widest utterances of any socialist demonstration that has been held in England. Dr. Clifford, the revered leader of the Free Church, hoped that the peers would be drowned in the Red Sea, as was Pharaoh.

William H. Byles, member of the House of Commons from Salford, North, said:

"We have got the lords by the throat and are going to strangle them. If the men of England have the same spirit as they had 300 years ago they will be ready for civil war."

The favorite emblem of the demonstrators was a turban carried to represent an imbecile face stuck on a pole and surmounted by a coronet, with the words beneath: "The first born."

The crowds made a hostile demonstration before the Constitutional Club and cheered at Premier Asquith's residence. They then made for the Lansdown house, which was guarded by police and eventually broke up quietly.

Newspaper Comment.

The Observer, which throughout has been the protagonist of the rejection of the budget by the House of Lords and whose violent articles on tariff reform has earned the writer, J. L. Garvin, the title of "The Wild Man of the Conservatives," printed several letters which it has received, denouncing it in unmeasured and almost unprintable terms.

The Observer devotes its leader this morning to an attack upon Chancellor Lloyd-George, whom it calls "The cad of the Cabinet." It says that the other front rank politicians fight with their fists, but Lloyd-George fights with his nails.

These are merely samples, which are not rivaled even here, after the manner of the time of the Boer War and afford a fair indication of the pretty fight which is now going on.

The Conservative Sunday Times, describing the scenes in Trafalgar Square, says that there is no use attempting to belittle the demonstration. The fifty speakers included a dozen of the members of the House of Commons. The success of the gathering, which was arranged at short notice, says the paper, was surprising. It was unmistakably the most notable and most effective demonstration in recent years. The turban emblem, tossed about by the mob and torn to pieces, looked like a head on a pike in the twilight.

MANY LIVES ARE LOST IN WRECKS AT SEAJOHN R. BRADLEY SAFE BUT MATES GONE.MAIL STEAMER PORTIA HAS TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

WORKS AND BOATS ARE FOUND

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 4.—The Gloucester, Mass., fishing schooner John R. Bradley, which became widely known through her use by Dr. Frederick A. Cook in his Arctic expedition and which was reported last night to have been wrecked in the recent gales off the coast of Newfoundland, is safe at Bonaville Bay. Details of the wreck of three other Gloucester vessels, the Clintonia, the Henry M. Stanley and the Mabel B. Hines, were still meager to-day.

It was known, however, that all three were driven on the rocks off Bay of Islands, the fishing center on the west coast of the colony, and that the Stanley is a total loss. It is understood that the Hines also was completely wrecked, but that the Clintonia later came off the rocks only slightly damaged. The crews were saved.

The mail steamer Portia, reported wrecked during her passage from New York to Bonaville Bay, reached Bonaville Bay after a terrible experience in the storm. She sustained much damage.

Four New Foundland fishing schooners also have been driven ashore on the west coast. Their crews reached land in their boats after a hard struggle and much suffering from cold and exposure.

An unknown steamer was heard whistling repeatedly early to-day inside of Cape Spear, near the rocks. It is thought that she later got her position from the Cape Spear whistler and steamed clear of danger.

The Red Cross Line steamer Rosalind, from New York, this afternoon was fifteen hours overdue from Cape Race, a run usually taking six hours.

Ellan-Vannin Lost.

London, Dec. 4.—All hope of the survival of the passengers and crew of the life of Man steamer Ellan-Vannin was abandoned to-day when word came of a steamer's upper works and small boats, picked up on the banks of the Mersey, were definitely identified as belonging to the missing vessel. The Ellan-Vannin carried twenty passengers and a crew of twenty-one.

Vegesack Thought Sunk.

Cuxhaven, Germany, Dec. 4.—News of fatalities resulting from the storm continue to reach here. The fishing steamer Berling picked up a lifeboat of the small steamer Vegesack, which, it is believed, sank with all on board. Four men, a young woman and child were found in the lifeboat frozen to death.

The torpedo boat G 89, while attempting to put into Husum Harbor, went ashore, but her position is not regarded as dangerous.

Schooner Hans Stranded.

London, Dec. 4.—The schooner Hans, bound for England, and loaded with iron ore, stranded to-day near Borkum. The entire crew, with the exception of a boy, was lost.

ERDER INQUEST WILL BEGIN TO-MORROWMRS. DOXEY IN JAIL AND AP-PARENTLY VERY ILL.ST. LOUIS POLICE SAY SHE IS SHAMMING.

HER DEFENSE IS OUTLINED.

St. Louis, Dec. 4.—With Mrs. Dora E. Doxey in the St. Louis city jail under the care of the jail physician, formal inquest into the death of the inquest office late to-day that the inquest into the death of William J. Erder will begin Monday. The woman is accused of having killed him by administering arsenic.

It is expected that the final report of Dr. W. H. Warren, dean of the medical faculty at Washington University, will be ready for presentation to the jury. Dr. Warren has already made affidavit that he found arsenic in the body of Erder after a partial examination.

Mrs. Doxey is held practically incommunicado. Her husband, the nurse who accompanied her from Columbia, and her aged father—Jefferson Fuller, of Alton, Ill.—were all denied access to her to-day, although the attorney, St. Louis, the police declare that her supposed physical collapse is a sham, and in this they are supported by the jail physician.

Mrs. Doxey's defense to the charge of bigamy and murder which she faces was indicated to-day by a Columbia attorney, who accompanied the prisoner to St. Louis. It will be argued that the man who was killed was not William J. Erder, who died the day he became ill last July. It will also be alleged that Erder, although not married to Doxey, but merely nursed him.

ZELAYA ASKS
INVESTIGATIONWants United States to Send Commission.Willing To Resign If Report Is Against Him.Decisive Battle May Be Fought Soon.

REBELS PREPARE TO ATTACK.

Managua, Dec. 4.—President Zelaya has asked the United States to send a commission to Nicaragua to investigate conditions existing here and says that if its findings show that his administration is detrimental to Central America he will resign.

President Zelaya believes that the information sent to the United States regarding cruelties practiced by his Government, is prejudiced and that a disinterested investigation would show matters in a better light.

NEVER HEARD OF IT.

Washington Not Advised of Zelaya's Desire For Investigation.

Washington, Dec. 4.—If President Zelaya has asked the United States to send a commission to investigate his administration, as indicated in a dispatch from Managua, no news of it has reached Washington late to-night.

Senator Hazen, the Nicaraguan Minister here, never has been received, and he had heard nothing of it. The Senator said he had not even received any instructions from his home government to govern his movements since past reports were handed to his charge d'affaires, Dr. Rodriguez, last Wednesday.

MEXICO UNDECIDED.

Not Ready To Take Any Position In Nicaraguan Affair.

Mexico City, Dec. 4.—Mexico has done nothing so far in regard to the Nicaraguan matter, it is taking sides neither with Nicaragua or the United States.

This declaration was made to-day by Gen. Enrique C. Creel, of Chihuahua, former Mexican Ambassador at Washington. Creel has been called to Mexico for a consultation with the Department of Foreign Relations with a view of his being sent to Washington in case that certain representations made to the American Government are received with favor at Washington, according to the official statement of Foreign Relations Minister.

Policy Not Defined.

"Mexico's policy is not yet defined," continued the Governor. "The attitude to be taken by this country will depend on developments. In fact, these developments are being awaited. Meanwhile this country is remaining neutral. The situation is, of course, grave, but it is not regarded as necessary for Mexico to take a stand either way in the matter, as the present is a strictly between the United States and Nicaragua."

"In so far as regards Central America as a whole, Mexico is anxious to see peace preserved and that all of the countries observe the provisions of the Washington treaty. To this end Mexico will be glad to assist the United States. This country naturally feels a deep interest in Central America through the bond of language, government and habits, and is anxious to contribute to all that tends towards its well-being."

Collecting Information.

"In the present crisis between the United States and Nicaragua, it has not been determined whether Mexico will co-operate with the United States or not. Data is being collected so that Mexico will be prepared to act with full understanding of existing conditions if it should decide to take a stand."

"It is true that Mexico is favoring either the candidacy of Irujo or Madriz to succeed Zelaya's administration?" was asked of the Governor.

"No attitude whatever has been taken by this Government up to this time," replied Gen. Creel.

Creel Fitted For Mission.

Touthing the possibility of Gov. Creel being sent to Washington, Mr. Mariscal said that Mr. Creel was particularly fitted for such a mission, having been Ambassador at Washington and being thoroughly acquainted with Central American affairs through his participation in the meeting of the peace conference in Washington and from the further fact of his having been special commissioner to Costa Rica when the court of arbitration was opened.

Mr. Mariscal further stated that no formal note had been sent to Washington by the Mexican Government, but that Charge d'Affaires Balvino Davalos had been instructed to make certain representations to the Government at Washington which would lead in the event of their being received with favor in sending Mr. Creel to Washington as special envoy.

STILL FAST IN MUD.

May Be Necessary To Remove All of the Prairie's Cargo.

Philadelphia, Dec. 4.—With nearly all her coal and great quantities of her stores on lighters, the transport Prairie is still fast aground to-night in the mud flats of Pea Patch Island, where she grounded Thursday night while speeding down the Delaware River on her way to Central America.

An attempt, the third, at floodtide this afternoon was made to float her, but she was not moved. The big transport is imbedded five or six feet in the soft mud and it is now believed that every bit of the cargo will have to be taken off before there will be a chance to free her.

Work was worked on the ship for two hours this afternoon and whether or not attempt will be made to pull her off at high water to-morrow morning is not known here. Admiral Kimball, on board the Prairie, is in constant communication by wireless with the Navy Department at Washington and he expects to receive orders during the night with regard to further attempts to float the vessel.

No Injury To Hull.

As the Prairie is resting in a bed of mud there has been no injury to her hull.

The officers and 700 marines on board the Prairie are chafing at the delay in getting away, but are working vigorously to help float the ship.

The marines have been put to good use in lightening the vessel, which breaks the monotony in the daily routine. Transport does not prevent that epic and span appearance she did when she drew away from the navy yard Thursday morning amid the cheering of hundreds of sailors and marines on shore. Her almost immaculate hull has been considerably blackened by the coal dust as the fuel is being transferred to the lighters.

The work of preparing the transport Dixie, now at the navy yard, has progressed so far that the ship can sail within a few hours to take the Prairie's place. The Dixie was being made ready for sea before the Prairie went aground and after the news of her mishap reached the yard, the work of getting her ready was pushed as much as possible. The officers of the Dixie fully expect to be ordered to take the Prairie's marines to the isthmus of Panama.

GUNBOAT AT CORINTO.

Vicksburg Reported To Have Arrived
In Nicaraguan Waters.

New Orleans, Dec. 4.—A special cable from Panama says:

Clear for action, and with her guns trained on the palace of the Provisional Governor, the gunboat Vicksburg is in command of the situation at Corinto, Nicaragua, according to advices received here to-night.

Following the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Nicaragua, the Vicksburg took prompt and energetic steps to protect Americans and American interests at Corinto.

Notice was served on the Provisional Governor, the local representative of President Zelaya, that the Vicksburg would hold him personally responsible for any harm that should befall Americans in Corinto.

Added emphasis was given to this notice by the further statement that the Vicksburg would train her guns on the Governor's palace should it fall of holes the moment the commander received the news of an attack on an American.

The emphatic stand of the Vicksburg's commander had a most salutary effect on the local Nicaraguan authorities. Not the slightest sign of a hostile outbreak has occurred. The Americans in Nicaragua are leaving by every available steamer and few of them now remain.

ESTRADA JUBILANT.

Leader of Revolutionists Pleased By Secretary Knox's Letter.

Bluefields, Nicaragua (By wireless telegraph via Colon), Dec. 4.—Gen. Estrada, the President of the Provisional Government and leader of the revolutionists, made the following statement to-day with regard to Secretary Knox's action in dismissing Senor Rodriguez, Nicaraguan Charge d'Affaires at Washington:

"I know that American sympathy is with us. The United States has always been the upholder and exponent of liberty, justice and good government. We are striving for this, and in the name of Nicaragua I send greetings to the people of that noble nation, the United States of America."

The action of the United States has been enthusiastically received here and there has been great rejoicing for the past few days.

HONDURAS NEXT.

Report That Downfall of President
Davila Has Been Planned.

New Orleans, Dec. 4.—The arrival to-day in New Orleans on the steamship Heredia of Col. Atanasio Davila, a well-known Honduran, coming from Ceiba, has given color to reports that a revolution against the Davila administration in Honduras was planned. It is said that Davila has come here prepared to take up the duties of Consul for a revolutionary party of Honduras as wanted by Zelaya is deposed, when a general outbreak is expected in that country. Zelaya, it is stated, dictated and signed a proclamation as President of Honduras and it is asserted the choice has been a most unpopular one. Davila has been in conference with friends of former President Bonilla since his arrival.

TROOPS MOBILIZED.

And Gen. Estrada Prepares For Decisive Battle At Rama.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Dec. 4.—A crucial battle between the joint insurgent forces of Gen. Estrada with 1,600 men and Col. Osejo with 1,000 men, on one hand and the Government troops of President Zelaya in unknown numbers on the other, will be fought before next Wednesday at Rama. It is expected that the battle will be fought with hundreds of miles of Honduran as wanted by Zelaya is deposed, when a general outbreak is expected in that country. Zelaya, it is stated, dictated and signed a proclamation as President of Honduras and it is asserted the choice has been a most unpopular one. Davila has been in conference with friends of former President Bonilla since his arrival.

SHOCKING RECORD OF LAKE NAVIGATION.

Twenty-Five Vessels and Sixty-two Lives Lost During Official
Year of 1909.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 4.—At 12 o'clock to-morrow night navigation on the great lakes for the year 1909 will be officially closed.

Twenty-five vessels, valued at $1,142,000 have passed out of lake history, and of those who operated these boats, sixty-two have perished.

Twenty-four collisions are recorded and at least 50 per cent. of these were caused by fog. Fire, wind and wave exacted their usual loss of money and life. During the month of November eight vessels were destroyed. The greatest loss of life on any one vessel occurred when the steamer John B. Cowie was rammed and sunk by the steamer Isaac M. Scott in Lake Erie on July 12. Fourteen men were drowned.

Last year's record was sixteen vessels lost, valued at $631,000, with a total tonnage of 24,260, total loss of life, 53.

LOCAL OPTION ELECTION

IN PULASKI COUNTY TAKES PLACE NEXT TUESDAY.

The Prohibition Forces Give An All-Day Demonstration At Somerset.

Somerset, Ky., Dec. 4.—(Special).—This was the greatest day on record in the history of the local option fight in Somerset. A parade half a mile in length, made up of the "dry" forces, marched for hours. In line were women and children carrying flags and white banners. Ten speeches were made on the streets by Rev. M. B. Adams, of Frankfort; Dr. Porter, of Lexington; Dr. Mayfield, of Lexington; Col. Gofforth, of Jessamine county, and the Rev. O. M. Huey, of Somerset.

This was really day previous to the election on next Tuesday, and several hundred people from all sections of Pulaski were in town to take part in the parade. The "wets" are making a still but determined fight and claim the victory by a safe margin.

One of the leading workers in the fight is the Rev. Mr. Davis, of Louisville, a negro prohibition worker. He arrived in Somerset Monday with the Danville colored band of twelve pieces, and has been speaking every six hours to the congregations of his race. A fight is being made among the negroes by both sides, as it is claimed that the result hinges on the vote of the negroes.

In the city election held in November the Prohibitionists endorsed candidates for all offices, but in each race their men were heavily defeated, and this is claimed by the "wets" to be a forecast in their favor on next Tuesday. Many leading Prohibitionists refuse to concur in the endorsement, and claim that the defeat of the "dry" candidates in the city races will not injure their cause.

TESTING THE TEA.

(New York Sun.)

"I bought tea the other day at a Japanese store," said the young housekeeper. "The proprietor said that I had doubts about the quality of the tea that had been recommended, so he started back to the rear of the store. I expected him to return with a cup of steaming drink, but he brought a small ash tray and a match instead. He threw a pinch of tea into the tray, touched it with a lighted match and watched it burn. Then he applied the

Savage Work

Brutality Gets Furs Which Fashion Deceives.

HOURS OF SUFFERING FOR ANIMALS IN THE TRAPS.

THEN, AT END OF DESPAIRING WAIT, A CRUEL BLOW.

CUNNING OF THE WOODSMAN.

The fur taking season is now at its height, and several hundred men and boys are engaged in it more or less actively in northern Minnesota until the end of winter. The muskrat is the staple fur-bearing animal of this district and is being slaughtered in the swamps from the outskirts of Duluth to the northern frontier, says the Minneapolis Tribune. There are other animals which yield their pelts to swell the exchequer of the trapper, but they are comparatively scarce.

More than 5,000,000 rats are killed each year in America and their skins dressed for the market, appearing in garments under names which the humble rat would never be able to recognize. Of the total perhaps half a million skins are taken in Minnesota, and the rivers and swamps around Duluth give up their full quota, as they are favorite breeding grounds. In spite of this death rate the muskrat population is not so much depleted as it is made a source of yearning to the trapper, who is a fearful amount of suffering is inflicted upon the dumb creature of the woods and rivers. For hunting is perhaps the most inhumane of the killings followed by human beings. The killing of domestic animals is bad enough, the pursuit of woodland game by the sportsman, and many savage aspects, particularly the mutilation of wild things which limp away from the fastnesses of the forest to a lingering death, but the taking of fur so far exceeds them in cruelty that there is scarcely room for comparison.

The animals which are the victims of the fur hunter are the beaver, otter, fox, mink, skunk, weasel, badger, martin and muskrat.

Suffering Inflicted.

The great suffering inflicted is due to the methods followed in the chase and to the sharpened wits of the victims, for man has pursued them remorselessly for centuries, and has been successful. He might be designated as a separate instinct to avoid his snares. They are seldom seen in the daytime, hence the use of the trap is out of the question. There is also the expenditure of money, and also the serious damage of the hides, for holes in the fur are of little use. The trapper, when it comes to reckoning dollars and cents, so steel traps are a very expensive item. The men who hunt fur for the market are known as trappers, because the trap is used to catch them. They live far in the wilds, where the animals they seek are most plentiful. There are hundreds of them in St. Louis County, mostly settlers in the country along the rivers and swamps who to their avocations by taking what furs they can during the winter months when work on the farm is impossible. They are hunters, and more traps and a large territory is needed to support a family. The little creatures they hunt to destruction.

When a promising spot is located, a place that tracks in the sand and mud show where the trapper is frequented by otter, mink or muskrat, half a dozen to a dozen traps are set on the runways of the wild animals nearly always follow the same path, and the trapper hurries to some of the traps, often miles away, and lays his instruments of torture, contented with the thought that he has a good lot. Then he returns to the first and makes the rounds as often as industry or inclination prompts him until he has covered the last one. Sometimes a week will elapse before he visits a given colony of traps.

Know Habits of Wild.

The fur animal, as has been said, is a wary creature, but in spite of his sharpened wits he is not a match for the trapper, whose wits are sharper than those of the wild animal. He often has to measure his cunning against the individual wits and tricks of the wild animal. He is a cunning animal, and the trapper knows it. He knows the habits of the animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

Just here is where the horror of fur hunting comes in. The trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

Long Hours of Despair.

If the animal is caught shortly after the trap is set, there is often a wait of days, even a week, before death releases him from his prison. During all this time the creature is benumbed by the cold, and the trapper is often in a cruel hand that laid the infernal machine can perform its only act of mercy. But even death does not end the suffering, for the trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

Brutal anger returns with renewed strength when the animal is released. The trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

The Final Agency.

It is the end, and the little creature realizes that it is facing the approaching doom. The silence which in the preceding moments had been broken by the quivering throat, now sends out its note of agony and fear—an appealing cry—perhaps the last note of the creature. The trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

of the woodland tribe to add to the profits of the trapper. He traverses great areas, sees much of the world and his surroundings, and is a consequence is more skilled in finding their snare. The wolf like the others, is mostly caught in traps, of larger pattern and even more cruel than those of the beaver. But the total tally of wolf scalps is not nearly as great as one would expect, for he is much wilder. The State pays a bounty of $10 for his destruction, and in many places he is exterminated. He is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

Catching the Wolf.

The trap into which the outlaw of the forest is expected to plant his paw is baited with a rabbit or some other delicacy calculated to tempt his appetite, and attached to the end of a long line, so that it will hold fast when the struggle comes. It is set out in a locality known to be infested by these ferocious creatures, who prowling nightly for prey in the surrounding effort to satisfy their hunger, sharpened by the long wait, they slip through the woods which can tire the best foot soldier. When the trap is sprung, the animal is caught. The trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

The Fatal Mistake.

But the tenth time is the fatal time. If the trap is sprung, the animal is caught. The trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

The Pitfall for Bruin.

When the bear is trapped the person who contrives the snare is in a predicament. The bear is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

Takes Trap Along.

Bruin is somewhat of a stick, but the punishment imposed by the barbarous teeth of the machine does not long permit of the animal's escape. The trapper, who is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. Slew Lion With Arrow.

Here is another encounter of a different kind. A lion, a young male, was seen in his recent book of travel. "In Unknown Africa," an Elgeyo boy was seen in his recent book of travel. Barely 5 years of age and a complete master of his primer after only three weeks' schooling is the record of a Massachusetts boy. He is Master Gordon F. Parent, of Bondville, who entered the primary school in September.

ARROW SAVED LIFE OF BOY.

A good many years since a writer on South Africa remarked flippantly that the lion was retiring from business. More than two decades have passed, yet the lion has by no means finally retreated, even from South Africa, and in many other parts of the Dark Continent his presence is constantly in evidence, says a writer in Chambers' Journal.

The favorite food of the lion may be classified as follows: antelope, buffalo, all kinds of antelope, cattle, sheep, goats, horses and asses. Where game is plentiful, the lion will eat almost anything. He is a voracious animal and he takes his meals with a voracity which is not to be despised. He is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. The trapper is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life.

Even on horseback the hunter is by no means able to outrun the lion. The lion is a cunning animal, and the hunter always succeeds in taking the animal's life. SIGNS CONTRACT.

Mayor Skain Indorses Action of Lexington Council.

FIXES THE WATER SUPPLY OF CITY FOR FIVE YEARS.

JUDGE R. L. STOUT RECOVERS FROM OPERATION.

Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN ON.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 4.—(Special.)—Mayor John Skain this morning signed the contract with the Lexington Water Company for supplying the city with water for the next five years, and which was adopted by both boards of the City Council Thursday night. With the signing of the contract this morning by the Mayor, and its publication this afternoon in the official newspaper, the contract to-day becomes legally binding.

Mayor Skain was absent from the city when the contract was adopted by the Council Thursday night, and did not return until last night. It was known, however, that the contract had the Mayor's approval and support, and his official act of resuming his official duties this morning was to sign it.

Similar To Lazarus Contract.

The contract is similar in most respects to the "Lazarus contract" which was presented to the City Council last summer by Alderman Fred Lazarus, and which aroused such bitter public opposition that two restraining orders were secured by citizens after a bitter fight in the Circuit Court enjoining the Council from adopting this contract. The Court of Appeals dismissed these injunctions and a new contract was drawn by E. D. Veach, president of the Board of Aldermen, last week and on Thursday was published in pamphlet form for distribution among those interested in the subject.

The Veach contract aroused considerable criticism and it was expected that the subject would be thoroughly discussed before action was taken by the Council. Both boards of the Council, however, promptly adopted the contract Thursday night, and the Mayor's signature to-day renders this action conclusive.

Articles Hasty Action.

The Lexington newspapers sharply criticized what they termed the hasty action of the Council, and Debra Brockbridge, editor of the Herald, openly intimates that the contract is so drawn that the Water Company may evade the provision requiring sufficient pressure to throw a stream of water sufficiently high in case of fire, and that the city will soon be called upon to buy steam fire engines to take the place of the fire department's engines, which have heretofore been operated simply by the water pressure. One provision of the Veach contract, which is considered a great improvement over the old Lazarus contract, is that it gives the city the option of buying the waterworks at the end of five years instead of at the end of twenty-five years, as the old contract and the Lazarus contract provided.

Proceedings of Fiscal Court.

At the meeting of the Fayette County Fiscal Court to-day Levi P. Spurr was re-elected county road supervisor to fill out the unexpired term ending June 10, 1910. The salary was fixed at $1,500 per year as it has been heretofore. Mr. Spurr immediately announced the resignation of W. F. Downing as assistant road supervisor for the unexpired term, and the court fixed the salary at $1,300 per year. Mr. Downing was re-elected to the position. The Fiscal Court had neglected last summer to go through the formality of electing Supervisor Spurr when his term expired, but as the political upheaval in this county at the November election will make it impossible to-day to remedy their negligence by re-electing Supervisor Spurr, and keeping the Republicans out of some nice slices of pie until June 10, as the road supervisor makes a number of desirable appointments.

Circuit Court Cases.

George Johnson, colored, was found guilty of false swearing and given one year in the penitentiary at the session of the Circuit Court to-day. He registered in the Southern Depot precinct as Louis McKinley, 235 McKinley street, and was sworn as to his right to register.

In the case of Ben Williams, colored, charged with falsely swearing to his right to register, Judge Jury was unable to agree and was dismissed. Williams is a well-known trotting horse groom and was the attendant of the famous 2-year-old trotter, Billy Burke, this season. The registration officers testified that he swore that he lived on 620 Bolivar street, but Williams claims he meant 620 Brisbane street, where it was shown he voted when in Lexington. The jury is said to have stood ten to two for acquittal.

Contract For Furnishings.

A contract has been let for the furnishing of 140 rooms of the Eastern Kentucky Normal School at Richmond, at an aggregate cost of about $6,000. The reading rooms and parlors will be in equipment in building in the future, excepting the State Capitol. The furniture consists of the regular installation of beds, desks, dressers, mission furniture, rugs and carpets. On January 15 a public opening will be given, when visitors will have an opportunity to inspect the new furnishings.

Recovery From Operation.

Circuit Judge R. L. Stout, of the district comprising Woodford, Franklin, Scott and Bourbon counties, who about three weeks ago had a small tumor removed from his abdomen by an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital here, was well enough to leave the hospital and return to his home at Versailles, Judge Stout has entirely recovered from the confinement to his room at the hospital, which was a matter of precaution the physicians in charge thought advisable. He is now improving rapidly and is expected soon to resume his place upon the bench.

College Association Meets.

A meeting of the Association of Kentucky Colleges was held to-day in this city at the building of State building with representatives of Central, Transylvania and State Universities and Georgetown, Berea and Kentucky Wesleyan Colleges present.

The principal business of the meeting was the appointment of a committee on nomination for eligibility and a committee on by-laws.

President Arthur, of Georgetown College, presided, and the only program rendered was the reading of a very interesting paper by President J. J. F. F. of Kentucky Wesleyan, upon Rhodes Scholarships in the United States, and an address by Dr. J. C. Ter-

SIGNS CONTRACT.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign.

The committee which began work yesterday morning to raise the $25,000 which it is necessary to have by December 15 to pay the debt on the Lexington Y. M. C. A. building, had by noon to-day raised $12,425 of the amount. A big clock face erected in the courtyard yard indicates by its minute hand each day at noon the amount which has been raised up to that time, while the hour hand points out the time at which they must be raised. The campaign is exciting much public interest.

Receives Many Congratulations.

Mrs. W. W. Bruce, one of the oldest and most prominent residents of this city, was 88 years old yesterday and celebrated the occasion to-day with a dinner, which was attended by a large number of her relatives and friends. John Wanamaker, the famous Philadelphia merchant, who is an old friend of Mrs. Bruce, sent the following telegram:

"New York City, Dec. 3, 1909.—Mrs. W. W. Bruce, Lexington, Ky.: Earnest and affectionate congratulations to you on your eighty-eighth birthday. Every blessing be yours."
"JOHN WANAMAKER."

Lexington Notes.

The Rev. R. N. Simpson, who for several years has been pastor of the Chestnut Christian church, has gone to New Albany, Ind., to take the pastorate of the Central Christian church. He will begin his preaching at New Albany to-morrow. The Chestnut-street church has not yet secured a successor to Mr. Simpson.

The Hon. Ruby Laffoon will be the orator at the Elks' annual memorial day exercises, which will be held at the opera-house here to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The report of the Collector of Internal Revenue for this district, S. J. Roberts, on corporations was recently made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington and shows there are about 800 corporations doing business in the Seventh district. The report is made under the recent act of Congress placing a tax on corporations.

The Security Trust Company sold to-day at public auction the residence 199 East High street to Mrs. R. J. Patton for $4,100. W. T. Sistrunk, the contending bidder.

For the week closing to-day the bank clearings of Lexington were $118,501.44 over $765,161.11 for the corresponding week a year ago or an increase of $353,210.33.

BACK TO GOLF LINKS PRESIDENT RUSHED.

Washington, Dec. 4.—President Taft to-day resumed his favorite amusement, golf, and defeated Senator Bourne and Frank B. Kellogg in a game over the Chevy Chase links.

The President, accompanied by his two competitors, rode to the Country Club in one of the big White House automobiles. Attired in a light-colored sweater jacket and without his coat, Mr. Taft was quickly out on the first tee. From the start of the game he set a lively pace for Mr. Kellogg, the "trust-buster," and the Senator.

Mr. Taft appeared to be in high spirits and glad of the opportunity to get back to the game. The preparation of his message to Congress, following immediately after his long whirl over the country, prevented his indulging in the pastime.

The score was not given by the trio, but both Mr. Kellogg and the Senator acknowledged that they were defeated, the game being called off at the fourteenth hole.

BRAZIL LIBERATES AMERICAN FILIBUSTERS.

Hackensack, N. J., Dec. 4.—A letter from Secretary of State Knox received here to-day by Mrs. Alice deWolf contained the information that several young Americans, who were captured in Brazil two years ago while on a filibustering expedition, had been liberated. One of them was George Vice, of Hackensack. Mrs. deWolf, who is a friend of Mrs. Vice, said that her son's mother, had taken an active part in the effort to obtain his release. She was seriously injured on the expedition and had been in a hospital at Bahia.

Doctors of Two Continents Could Make No Impression on Torturing Skin Disease—All Treatments Failed for Nineteen Years.

THEN CUTICURA CURED SWIFTLY AND EASILY

"I contracted my disease at school in London, England, when I was fourteen years old—I am now thirty-three. My father put me under the care of my family physician who diagnosed my disease as itch. But after several months' treatment without receiving any benefit, I was advised to go to a hospital. I attended the Hospital, London. Then and on two other occasions, without my getting any benefit, they treated me for eczema. My next attempt was trying different ointments from doctors and druggists. Then I read patent medicines, including Cuticura.

"I passed examinations for government situations but was finally rejected at the medical examinations. After three attempts to enlist in the British army I succeeded at last but was discharged on account of my eczema. The disease was confined to face, arms and legs, my face being actually raw at times. I came to America thirteen years ago, but my face became worse, if possible. When in New York City I was advised to go to a hospital where I was sent to the Hospital in Brooklyn. I was put under the care of Professor—, but this also added to the number of unsuccessful attempts. I returned home to England and tried the Hospital, Liverpool, the Hospital, London, and the world-famed London—Hospital, but without getting cured. I came back to America six years ago. DESIGNING GUNS TO SHOOT UP AIRSHIPS.

Washington, Dec. 4.—A gun is being designed by ordnance experts in the army for the purpose of shooting dirigible balloons and aeroplanes. Gen. Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, in his annual report to the Secretary of War, submitted to-day, outlines some of the difficulties which the gun must overcome.

"Dirigible balloons and aeroplanes move rapidly, change directions quickly, alter their elevations at will and are not moved from any objects that assist aiming," points out the Ordnance Chief. "Gen. Crozier says that it is probable that the fire of small arms rifle or of machine guns against the dirigible balloons will prove most effective. Sixty United States rifles, caliber .30, model of 1903, are now being fitted with controller for vertical angle of fire.

CHEW YOUR SOUP AND YOU WILL LIVE LONG.

Dr. Fletcher Says In Five Years It Will Not Be Respectable To Be Sick.

New York, Dec. 4.—"If you want to be fashionable and in style you must chew your food," was the observation made today by Dr. Horace Fletcher, the famous exponent of rational eating.

Dr. Fletcher, who with his wife, sailed abroad on the steamship Saxonia to observe mastication in foreign lands, added the comforting intelligence: "In five years from now it will not be considered respectable to be sick."

"You may feel like ridiculing the idea that it is well to chew your soup," said the doctor cheerfully. "I will, however, ask you to try it. It will improve the soup and help you. Never eat when worried, nervous or angry. It is making and absorbing poison to do it. You should chew your food thirty-two times with every mouthful. If you do this you will live to a great age."

LIBERIA WANTS HELP TO INCREASE POLICE.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The Republic of Liberia has requested the assistance of the Government of the United States in organizing a large police force to control the natives who inhabit the African hinterland. The officials here have not yet decided to comply with the request, but with a view of observing the operation of the police and semi-military forces employed by the European powers to subdue the wild tribes in Liberia, it has designated a military attaché for Liberia. This officer is First Lieut. Benjamin O. Davis, of the Tenth Cavalry.

It is hoped that the information which Lieut. Davis may acquire as to the management of the interior tribes of Liberia may be useful to the United States Government in handling the native inhabitants of the Southern provinces of the Philippine Islands. Lieut. Davis recently served a term as professor of military science and tactics at the Wilberforce University, Ohio.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Numerous changes in the personnel of the officers of the Atlantic fleet were announced to-day by Acting Secretary Winthrop.

Charles E. Vreeland, chief of the naval intelligence bureau, will be given command of the second division; Capt. Samuel P. Comly, now in command of the Fourth division, will be moved up to the third and Capt. Hugo Osterhaus, now in command of the second, to the fourth.

Capt. Temin M. Potts, commander of the Georgia, is given the choice assignment of chief of the naval intelligence office in Washington. Capt. Albert G. ROCK BOY AND BRAVES GET HUNTING GROUND.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Chief Rock Boy and his band of 135 Chippewa braves are now officially at home on their new hunting grounds on the Blackfoot reservation in Montana and 1,300,000 acres in Valley county of that State, which were withdrawn from the white settlers and have been opened again to settlement.

Rock Boy and his tribe got a real example of rapid transit in Indian affairs. The Department of the Interior had intended to let them locate in Valley county near the Fort Peck reservation. But when the white settlers protested and the department became convinced the red men would do better in a land where they could hunt and fish.

On November 11 Supt. W. R. Logan, of the Fort Belknap Indian school, was instructed to find a new place for Rock Boy, and within two weeks he had then all on a special train speeding for the new hunting grounds on the Blackfoot reservation.

A DEBUTANTE'S TEA

DEAREST ELEANOR:

On Wednesday afternoon I went with Cousin Alice to a tea at which one of the sweetest of the younger set made her bow to society.

She was so simply gowned that I cannot refrain from admiring in cold ink the good sense displayed in the selection. Her golden beauty was typified in the white mousseline over yellow. Embroidered bands were used as trimming, helped out by the simplicity of fine tucks. A round yoke was met at the neck line by a pointed band. Then, almost in an apron line, another broad band was employed on the skirt. The tucked sleeves were edged with straight insertion, and the short, girlish skirt received its fullness from a tucked flounce.

Lavender chiffon cloth was the pretty frock of her chum. It was sprinkled with green embroidered sprays, and these afforded sufficient ornamentation for her gown.

The mother was arrayed in a lovely black chiffon over lavender. The bodice crossed in fichu lines over a yoke of tucked mousseline. Iridescent embroidery gave a fascinating mottled effect. It was an elegant contrast to her daughter's frock.

Cousin Alice, as usual, was in a dress that hinted of December woods at sunset. You know how becoming those tones are to her. Her gown was of silk crepe of the dull rose color—just the shade of dead leaves. A yoke of gold tissue brightened this picture gown. The long line of the shoulder was of tucks crossed with bands of the gold. From the draped bodice the gown fell in graceful folds to the floor. There was a charming decorative effect at the side: over a panel of gold the outer material was caught by huge silk flower forms of a golden brown. Her scarf of chiffon and fur was richly supplemented by a huge muff and a fur turban. At the side of this hat an enormous rose was placed.

I wore a simple gown of grayish blue, with long revers of a darker color. I like the sleeves of this dress because they carry out the idea of the rest of the coat. They are edged with flat cuffs that cross on the under side. My large blue hat, with its greenish blue velvet crown and blue wings, harmonized very well with the suit. I can never hope to rival Alice in elegance, but I felt quite well dressed in my simpler costume.

With love,

MADGE.

Gifts for the Country Cousin

"When Aunt Mary opened the tidy."

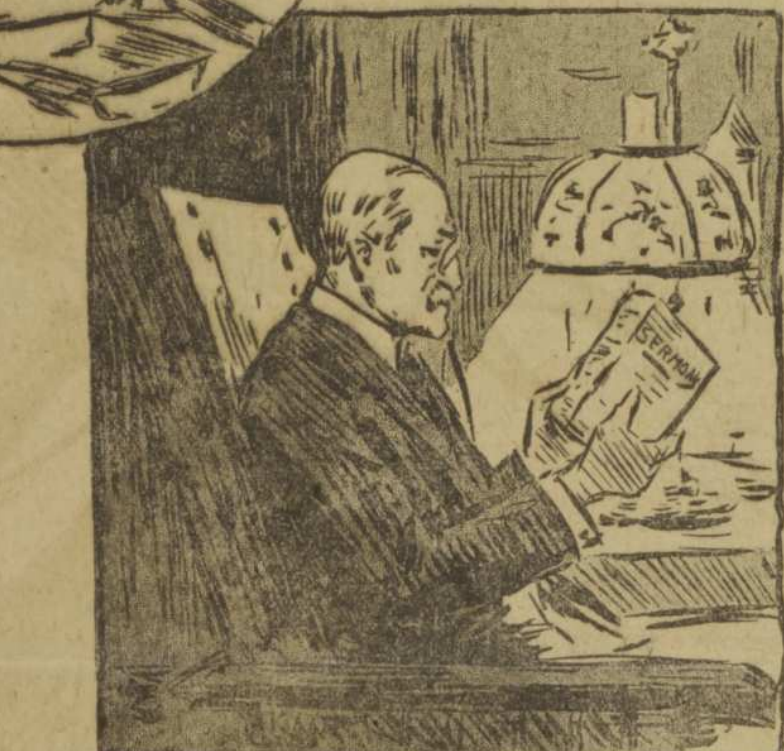

EVERY ONE possesses country cousins or their equivalent. The degree of relationship may vary, or there may be none at all; the distant connections may be uncles, aunts or merely friends, and their homes may be in towns they would scorn to have called "country," far though these may be from the big centers of city life. Yet to those of us who do live in such centers the dweller in any less crowded region is likely to be considered as one living in the country.

"New York isn't nearly so pleasant at this time of the year as the country," wrote a visitor in her bread-and-butter letter after returning from a stay in a thriving town of 50,000 inhabitants. The fact that this same town had beautiful suburbs within easy driving distance—and that it was not New York—to her mind made it "country."

Wherever the "country cousins" are, however, they are to be reckoned with or for in the Christmas preparations. My plea today is that in such reckoning you regard them less as country people and more as human beings.

Do I hear an expostulation? Do you declare that you always look upon them as human beings and as beloved relatives as well? Stop and think a bit. Do you recollect what you sent them last Christmas? Put on your considering cap. Better still, if you follow the wise custom of keeping your Christmas lists over from year to year, consult that for last Christmas, and see what you sent them. Here it is. Now read it over.

"Aunt Mary—tidy." You haven't forgotten that tidy? It was given to you the year before by a grateful Sunday school scholar, and when you opened the parcel you said: "It was very sweet in Jane to make it, but I wouldn't be found dead with that thing in my parlor." Yet you were quite willing Aunt Mary should receive that atrocity as a token of your affection for her. Don't you feel a little ashamed when you think of it?

"Sermons were never in his line."

Let's go on with the list. "Uncle Tom—book of sermons." You probably gave him these because you thought they might do him good, though you might have known he would not read them. Sermons were never much in his line, and the poor old gentleman's eyes are too bad now to allow him to use them much. When he can read he would rather have something a little more lively than those sermons.

The next item is for Cousin Ella. I don't wonder you wish to pass that by without notice. "Framed picture" looks very well, but do you recollect the picture? It was a chromo lithograph, and not a good one at that. I grant that Cousin Ella doesn't know much about art, but is that any reason why you should inflict upon her such a confusion of glaring colors as were confounded in that picture? Why didn't you give her a good photograph, simply framed. If you had to give her a picture? There's nothing in which there's a bigger risk than in the buying of pictures for others. When you buy one for a person whose tastes are not well known to you, get something non-aggressive, at least—something you would not object to having on your own parlor or sitting room walls.

There, after all, is the keynote to the choice of Christmas gifts for the country cousins. Don't send them something to which you yourself would hardly give house-room. Even though their tastes may very possibly differ from yours, even if you are not sure of their preferences in most lines, select something which would please you, and you may be pretty sure to please them.

This principle is a good one to start with, but there is more than that, even, in the gifts for the country cousins. Try to study their individual needs a little, and consider these in choosing your presents. More than that, give them what they want, as well as what they need. All of us have a touch of the feeling expressed by the woman who said that she could get along without the necessities of life, if she could only have the luxuries. The country cousin is probably like the rest of us. So, if you make her a gift which you think will supply a necessity, add to it a flavor of luxury which will raise the present above the level of the commonplace.

AN ADDED PERSONAL TOUCH

For example: You know that she is likely to need towels. Well, towels are acceptable to me in any circumstances, and doubtless to any other housekeeper; but there is an added grace in receiving them when they are adorned with an embroidered letter, which shows that some thought of me went into the gift beyond the mere business of purchasing it. Don't you believe the country cousin would feel that grace, too? Or, suppose that you give her dish towels—a homely present, but very welcome to most of us. Mark these, too, with an outline letter or name in heavy red marking cotton.

It will take little time to do them, and the handiwork will impart to the gift the personal touch which trebles its value to the recipient.

Follow the same principle with the rest of the gifts you send the country cousins. Never make them a dumping heap for last year's unwelcome gifts. What you don't want yourself because it is useless or unattractive or unsuitable is an outrage on the spirit of Christmas to bestow upon some one else.

Go further than this. Don't leave to the random impulse or the last hurried moment the choice of gifts for the country cousin. Don't say, even in your thoughts, "Oh, the live away off, and don't see anything new, and will never know if this is not in good taste." You can't be positive on the taste question, and even if you were, is that quite the spirit which should go with the choice of a Christmas gift?

Try to reconstruct your mental attitude toward the country cousins and the gifts you choose for them. In the first place, fill yourself full of the real spirit of Christmas, the spirit of a great gift bestowed with a great love. That is the ideal of giving you should set before yourself. In the light of that, buy your gifts for the country cousins.

You look at the purchase of such gifts in a rather different way with that light upon them. You make your choice in another fashion from that you have heretofore followed. You buy as though you were selecting for the near and dear, and if you do not know the tastes of the distant one to whom you are giving, imagination takes the place of knowledge. And with that imagination put common sense, and you have a pair it is hard to beat.

IMAGINATION AND GOOD SENSE

Your imagination tells you that if a person is off in the real country, away from many neighbors, she may need brightness and beauty brought into her life. Your common sense warns you not to achieve this by the gift of useless trifles in the line of ornament and bric-a-brac, which clutter more than they beautify. In the place of these, you choose a good picture, a nice piece of brass, a candlestick or a lamp or a scene, a pretty table cover or a couch cushion, or something else that will be pleasing after the first novelty of possession is worn off.

Or you may know that the country cousin is a housekeeper who loves dainty things, and has little means to satisfy that love. Send her an attractive bureau cover or tray cloth or centerpiece or a set of dollies or a little china which will be useful as well as ornamental. Give her a set of napkins or of bouillon cups or of finger bowls or a cup and saucer or a pair of candlesticks or any other pretty thing you would like for yourself. Or turn your back upon these and give her something for her own personal adorning, a delicate jacket or collars and cuffs or half a dozen yards of novel ruching or some other neckwear or a pair of silk stockings or gloves or, if she is a young girl, something dainty in underwear. What would you like yourself in her place? There is your guide.

"Fill yourself with the spirit of Christmas—then choose."

But are there no men country cousins? Surely there are, and they demand more thought than the women. But even here you may make a wise choice if imagination and common sense are again put to work. The young men are easily pleased. A tie, a fancy handkerchief, a pipe—no man ever had too many pipes—a pair of silk socks, gloves. With an older man the choice is harder. The pipe may do here again, or a tobacco pouch or desk furnishings, unless he is likely to be overloaded with these.

When in doubt for man or woman, old or young, a safe gift almost always is a magazine subscription. Here is a gift which comes every month and lasts a whole year. Books are good, if you know your country cousin's tastes, but a magazine is better. Select that which will to your mind meet most nearly the wishes and the preferences of the one to whom it is to go, and you will rest content in the thought that in one instance at least your choice of a Christmas gift is likely to be a success.

THE SLAVE

OF THIS you may make sure: No other domicile is so sick-and-weak as that where "mother" does for herself.

How often the phrase may be otherwise and mournfully applied cannot be said to one familiar with the limitations of flesh and blood. Her house gets to be as truly a part of herself as the shell is of the snail. No cloudy windows, no dusty corners, no drifts of "fluff" under beds and tables while she is up and around. She may be the soul of kindness to others; she is unmerciful to herself. There is never a moment in the day when she does not believe that she could take one more step if it were necessary. She has a way of saying that she "doesn't mind work" and "enjoys better than anybody can tell her what she can do and bear." Her thumb and finger are (figuratively) never off the screw that regulates her nervous system, and she is always ready to give it one more twist.

This is, strictly speaking, not housewifery, but slavery, and of a worse sort than ever disgraced Sam Domingo or found its way into "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The nominal slave was an irresponsible machine whose care for his work ceased when he dropped his hoe in the field or washed up the last dish at night. He carried no anxiety to his pillow and ate his meat in careless security. Providing, paying for what was provided and looking out for the future were the master's business. The American housemother plans and performs and takes consequences in her single self. Her brain works, her heart palpitates, her nerves are as tense as violin strings, while she toils up to the full measure of her strength through tasks that should be done by coarser hands. She is maid-of-all-work, wife, mother, business manager and housekeeper; she hears the lessons her children learn at home for the salaried school teacher; she belongs to the church sewing society; she teaches in the Sunday school; she pays and receives calls, and is ambitious to see her husband a rich man some day. Then she will keep her carriage, ride where she now walks and rest instead of toiling. The vision is in the tomb, and another wife, younger, more attractive and more daintily bred, enters into her labors.

It was a woman of this stamp who hoped that "Gabriel would stop softly when he passed her grave, if that of the world should come in less than a thousand years. She couldn't get rested out in less time."

A Boy's Fate

ONCE heard a grown-up beauty declare in the presence and hearing of a half-grown brother that "every boy should be put under a barrel at 14, and kept there until he was 20, out of sight of his kindred and acquaintances."

"Up to 21 he is an unmitigated nuisance," concluded the belle, with the vanity of one who has put the case smartly.

The lad listened to the tirade without the twitch of a muscle—solidly that proved him to be well used to such flaying. This damask lady, in that family, turned out badly, and were cried down by a scandalous community for disgracing a decent and godly assembly. Hearing this, I recollected the beauty and the barrel and speculated saddy whether or not this was the key to the enigma.

Baby's Tray Cloth

THE neatest tray cloth or tablecloth protector for baby who dines with the family is made from white olefin, but so covered with its own, silky cover of heavy linen as to be concealed from sight. Two pieces of hemstitched or scalloped linen forty heavy, smooth damask linen with a pattern is best—seen together along their edges so that there is a side opening into which to slip the old cloth. One will be of little avail, unless every day is washed. This white linen is necessary in sixes, to say the least.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

A Dangerous Experiment

WASHED a waist in gasoline, and my hands cramped so much that the pain was almost unbearable. I had been told that it was a good idea to wash in gasoline, and I had tried it. I had been told that it was a good idea to wash in gasoline, and I had tried it. I had been told that it was a good idea to wash in gasoline, and I had tried it.

The heat had probably driven off or mollified the sharper volatile gases of the fluid. I hope you heated the gasoline by setting it in hot water. That is the only safe way.

For allaying the smarting try good cold cream, applied at once. Mutton tallow, tried out and flavored with a few drops of lavender, is a homely but good substitute for the cold cream.

"Speaking of" chewing gum, I wish there were anything that would remove it forcibly from every pair of jaws that operate it in the disgusting eyes of decent folk in tram and steam car; in fact, in all our public resorts. I counted six men and four women in one trolley car yesterday—and in a fashionable quarter of the city—who were thus engaged. There is a horrible fascination in the spectacle that forces me to watch the working jaws and count those who thus employ their facial muscles. What is the charm that induces the practice?

On Custard Making

I take pleasure in sending the results of my experience in custard making. For a very sweet custard a cupful of sugar may be used to each quart of milk. Never use more than that, or the custard will be sickening and watery. The quantity used is really a matter of taste. My own recipe is as follows: Your eggs, half a cup of sugar, one quart of milk, a scant half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg.

Beat the eggs too much. Beat until the whites and yolks are thoroughly blended, then add sugar and nutmeg. Beat until the mixture is thick and creamy. Pour into a bowl and let it stand for a few minutes. Then add a layer of oranges, sugar and cream. Put a layer of oranges, sugar and cream. Put a layer of oranges, sugar and cream. Put a layer of oranges, sugar and cream.

Nicest Heavenly Hash. Slice six oranges, one pineapple, six bananas. Lay the bananas in a bowl, sprinkle with sugar, and chopped light brown sugar. Put a layer of oranges, sugar and cream. Put a layer of oranges, sugar and cream. Put a layer of oranges, sugar and cream.

It has but one drawback that I can see, and that is that the layer of fruit, strawberries is not easily procured later in the year than June, although I am credibly informed that certain enterprising horticulturists offer for sale vines that will bear strawberries every month in the year. And I really saw in the New York market delicious ripe strawberries in mid-October, selling at 10 cents a quart!

Ambrosia as Salad

Our next letter has also to do with the much-discussed dessert, but treats it as a salad: First let me say that this dish is best served and looks best (to my way of thinking) when made upon individual salad plates instead of in a large dish. In the latter case the fruit gets too juicy when mixed in large quantities. Your eggs, half a cup of sugar, one quart of milk, a scant half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg.

then a spoonful of whipped cream and a red cherry. Can you object to calling this "Heavenly Hash"? It is made of all manner of good things. It is very rich. When served with a heavy dinner it is less palatable than more solid salads; with a light luncheon it is ideal! M. S. (Chicago). You are in the right as to the introduction of a heavy salad into a regular course dinner. Dinner salad should be a separate course, accompanied by crackers and cheese and prepared with a French dressing. It is designed to serve as an impetus to palates whose what jaded by what has gone before.

to effect this the salad comes about midway in the succession of dishes. I drop this remark here because several members have written inquiries concerning the place chicken and lobster salad hold in the sequence of courses at a dinner party. They should not be there at all. As our Ohio member says, their place is in the luncheon and supper menu.

Wanted—Candy Recipes Can any of the members give me recipes for home-made candies which may be depended upon? The recipe for French candy which I have fails about every other time. I know this is not altogether my fault, as I have tried it many times. I would like to know if it is really as good as it is said to be. I would like to know if it is really as good as it is said to be. I would like to know if it is really as good as it is said to be.

I hope, by now, you have had the recipes for home-made candies published in the talk upon "Holiday Goodies." If you want others, let us know. Cream mints are easily made. A fondant of confectioner's sugar, made by boiling it with a little

CORRESPONDENCE PAGE OF FASHIONS & BEAUTY

A Carol of Christmas Clothes.

WITH the first days of December Dame Fashion begins to show herself as entirely occupied with Christmas finery. In shop windows and on shop counters one sees the evening coats, and dresses, and hoods which are to grace the forthcoming holiday functions—some bitterly expensive, some astoundingly cheap, and every single thing giving ideas to the home-sewer of clever fingers and adventurous heart. For it takes a good deal of courage to buy material and start in to conceive the wonder that shop etiquette only allows the non-buyer to stare at once or twice. But once you've dared the venture and gone on to finish—good gracious, what reward! Two—even three—garments sometimes, instead of the one you had thought awhile of buying ready made; and all of them for the price of that single gown.

But among the many pretty things displayed, there are, as I have said, some astoundingly cheap, and surely the long, loose cape cloaks of unlined cloth—may be counted among them. In every single one of the new colors—dim green, rich and pale blues, smoke gray, raisin, white and cream—these cloaks are to be seen with velvet military collars, touched with tinsel braid, for sums that sometimes run as low as $5.00. The more elaborate of these cloaks may be lined with a soft tulle silk which doubles the price, though this also sometimes includes a cord trimming and very fine buttons. Such cloaks are for evening use almost entirely, and sensible women sometimes buy the cheaper ones and line them at home with flannel, which is a very easy thing to do, as the garments are almost formless.

In the temple of party dresses, Dame Fashion chants a song of over-drapery of all sorts for women, and effects of extreme simplicity for misses; though in point of material, color and delicacy of texture her Christmas carol is incessantly for what might be called exquisiteness. It would be impossible to enumerate the many cloud-like tissues used for evening frocks, the many sorts of heading and the unnumbered species of embroidery, for it looks as if every manufacturer or maker has only indulged in his own fancy, or else as if the lady who is wearing the prettiest has been making her own fashion. Lovely, too, are the shapes of the draperies these cloudy tissues evolve over plain slips of satin or silk, some of them running to the most foolishly fascinating overskirts, some falling with stately Greek lines, and some again swathed only about a fancy lace bodice in a girlishly high and odd conceit. But then mad bodice draperies are sometimes used to conceal a shortness of the other material; so it is an ill wind that does not blow the home-sewer some good.

The accompanying illustrated model gives excellent ideas of what is to be worn for holiday dances and theater, opera and dinner parties, and any damsel or dame expert with the needle and shears will find the various models very easy to copy. Figure A depicts the employment of lace, or beaded or embroidered net over a satin or silk foundation—one of the draped creations, in fact, which are so much in vogue. It is essentially for ball wear, though it is perfectly correct for the opera, and with the addition of a neck scarf and long gloves, it would be entirely proper in an orchestra seat at the theater.

The dress, which is in two pieces, consists of a foundation of bluish-pink satin, topped by a bodice and skirt drape of pink fish-net, beaded with rosy pearls and bordered with a band of lace applique. The fringe at the bottom of the skirt drape is of pink chenille, the lacing cord of the same and the sleeve bows of pink velvet.

Where liked, the fringe could be left off the drape; and if the purse allows no more expense, the dress could very well be of an inexpensive quality of messaline, draped with voile bordered by a band of satin ribbon. For an unmarried girl this suggestion would be determined to put an end to this unjust condition of things, has had the happy thought of trying the one hue that has hitherto been shunned by every one but undertakers—namely, black.

The decoration is being arranged by Anna Austen, of Bond-street, and Miss Samuda, who has the matter in hand, told an Express representative that the effect of the new scheme is astonishingly striking and beautiful.

"The black ground of the paper," Miss Samuda said, "is relieved with Chinese flowers in light green and a very beautiful blue, with sprays of a dull rose pink."

The black ground offers, as may be seen, a very different effect from the usual white background.

So, to begin at the beginning of the subject, let me say that a bride-show may include any little departure from the usual cut and dried affair and be all the prettier for it. Dainty food of some light sort, with an appropriate beverage, will also make the occasion go off easily, and the gifts may be the veriest trifles for the new home or articles that the bride herself only would need.

As to the bridegroom gracing the fun, he may be there or he may not, as the givers of the entertainment decide. If the young lady soon to wed—for the shower is as often given before the marriage as after it—is one of a group of warm school friends who feel that they want to have a little last time with Mary alone, there is no earthly reason why the prospective husband should be invited. But in this case, it would be in better taste to give the shower in the afternoon, with the evening function the gentleman would naturally expect to be there.

A number of my young friends lately gave to a college chum on the eve of marriage a "surprise shower," which seemed to me to have some very pretty points.

The invitations to the gathering were given by word of mouth, so as to keep the thing as much of a secret as possible, and the parlors and the hall of the house chosen for the festivity were prettily decorated with huge bunches of waxed autumn leaves, chrysanthemums and winter berries. The various gifts, all of which had been sent to the house beforehand, were each enclosed in tissue paper, with the neat package tied with ribbon and marked with the giver's name. All were then enclosed in a shallow round basket, trimmed at the sides with yellow tissue paper, and covered over the top with the paper after the manner of a Jack Horner pie. When the future bride appeared she was given a wooden knife and told to cut the pie, which she did, her maid of honor handing out the various gifts with a little appropriate speech for each one.

But the best of the fun came through each of the guests being entirely ignorant as to what the others had given, so with the unfolding of the various parcels, which contained everything from a 10-cent cooking spoon to a very pretty piece of cut-glass, the wonder and delight was general.

When everything had been looked at the girls went into the dining-room, where a round table, lighted with candles held for them a delicious afternoon bite consisting of fancy sandwiches, green salad, chocolate with whipped cream, candies, cake and lemonade.

The maid of honor gave the toast of the day, saying, as she lifted a wine-glass filled with lemonade, "May the bride continue to be the good chum of her schoolgirl friends and keep all their secrets as sacredly as of yore." The bride responded appropriately, tipping her own lemonade with the sweet hope that her girl friends would believe entirely in her eternal love and discretion.

And then they all cried a few dear tears, and kissed one another adorably, and talked beautifully about the tremendous importance and sacredness of marriage.

A couple already married were entertained with a most novel shower, this bringing many little trifles suitable alone to the young husband—a cigar cutter, a penwiper, an ivory book knife and such small things. But here a hearty laugh was raised by the final gift in the flower-trimmed tray that held them all, for these were two little bisque cups with this legend at the base of the ornament:

"Give Love the first place in your household."

The bride's gifts were also personal little trinkets and articles of the toilet, and the evening closed with a Dutch supper of beer and rye bread, sandwiches and potato and herring salad.

The most popular gifts of these pretty occasions consist of household linen of every description. But one shower basket seen contained truly wonderful things in the way of round and square rag rugs, rag curtains, sofa "nap robes," hand-worked cushion covers and laundry bags for personal and household linen. With the exception of the weaving of the rag things, every article had been made by hand, and, in expensive though each article was, altogether they seemed valuable and sensible gifts for any new household that was to be run entirely on a young man's salary.

Therein, really lies the most important point concerning the bride shower—the quality of the articles given must be in accordance with the means of the little home which they are to grace. Also, as the bride is supposed to get her most valuable presents in another way, it would be rather bad taste to compose the shower of any but a trifling or inexpensive nature.

Bright and useful kitchen utensils make acceptable gifts always, and if these are set upon a round table, covered with a pretty white cloth trimmed with a border of red, and paper poinsettias, or one of real holly and mistletoe, interspersed with bunches of green from the little Christmas fir tree, the effect produced is sure to be pleasing to all who behold it.

Where the shower basket is hung between folding doors and so arranged as to tip its contents at the bride's feet, as is sometimes done, it is made most effective if suspended by wide ribbons and ornamented with a motto in big readable letters. Here is a suitable legend:

"May all your life be showered with beautiful things."

As to the bridegroom gracing the fun, he may be there or he may not, as the givers of the entertainment decide. If the young lady soon to wed—for the shower is as often given before the marriage as after it—is one of a group of warm school friends who feel that they want to have a little last time with Mary alone, there is no earthly reason why the prospective husband should be invited. But in this case, it would be in better taste to give the shower in the afternoon, with the evening function the gentleman would naturally expect to be there.

A number of my young friends lately gave to a college chum on the eve of marriage a "surprise shower," which seemed to me to have some very pretty points.

The invitations to the gathering were given by word of mouth, so as to keep the thing as much of a secret as possible, and the parlors and the hall of the house chosen for the festivity were prettily decorated with huge bunches of waxed autumn leaves, chrysanthemums and winter berries. The various gifts, all of which had been sent to the house beforehand, were

GOWNS for the DINNER and DANCE

Back and Front of a Draped Gown.

A Short Dance-Frock of Point-d'Esprit.

This Tied Panier Is Attractive.

Fur and Silver Lace Trim. This Chiffon.

Painted Chiffon over Satin.

When dinner is served, women can trail clouds of glory after them in the lines of silk, lace or chiffon, while for dancing they are now able to take every movement in unhampered enjoyment; for the short and sensible round-length frock is being worn. Variations of the tunic and the panier are insisted upon by most designers, and lovely combinations of materials and colors appeal to the eye for the beautiful.

Old-gold satin is beautiful in combination with deep ecru lace. The draped bodice is held in front by a jeweled ornament and at the back by a full rosette of the material. Sleeves of lace are trimmed to accentuate the low shoulder line. The skirt is draped and caught at the side by two huge ornaments of satin.

Contrasted with this rich simplicity of a dinner gown is the frivolous dance frock of white point d'esprit. It has a round shirred yoke, outlined by cherry velvet ribbon and huge satin cherries. The girdle is of black thread lace and the skirt unusual in outline, with the lower half ornamented by a triple arrangement of black and white lace, cherries and ruffles. The three frills are edged with twisted ribbon, producing an attractive outstanding fluffiness, but approaching the extreme in decoration.

The other short-length gown is of much simpler design that depends upon its drapery for pleasing effect. It is of pale pink crepe de chine, and a painted border is adjusted with the cleverness of a French maker. The tucked yoke is quite shallow; from this an overdress falls and is curved in soft folds up toward the back. Suppleness of the material gives billowy lines without detracting from a graceful figure.

A tied panier of soft silk is most attractive on the light chiffon gown shown. White satin bands form a girdle over the full chiffon, and stiff bows occur at the front and again on the straps of the short sleeves. The lower fullness of the skirt is held in by a double line of shirring. This idea is simple enough to be copied by any woman who has the knack of draping soft materials.

The colors of a sunset are suggested in the painted chiffon dinner gown. Over an underdress of pale yellow the pale pinks and blues are brought into unobtrusive view. A cream lace yoke heads the draped bodice. The waist line is defined by twisted chiffon. Notice the beautiful sleeves. On a cloth-of-gold foundation, which just hints of the sun's rays, a band of lace and draped chiffon is placed. Iridescent bugle beads edge the sleeves and weight down the tunic.

Perhaps the combination of silver lace and fur is indicative of the season's favorite trimming. This pale lavender dress is decorated with bands of this lace. Silver-mesh braid forms a point in front and is used in three loose lines on each sleeve. As a final touch, rich brown fur edges each sleeve and the band of lace in the skirt. In color and line this is extremely beautiful.

There is an embarrassment of riches in this season's offerings for evening wear. By taking the best lines and the most becoming colors any woman ought to be able to profit by the efforts of designers who have epitomized the accepted styles in these gowns.
